New variant raises alarms

High transmission is cause for concern, WHO panel declares

By Raf Casert and Calvin Woodward
Associated Press

BRUSSELS — Nearly two years into the COVID-19 pandemic, the world raced Friday to contain a new coronavirus variant potentially more dangerous than the one that has fueled relentless waves of infection on every continent.

A World Health Organization panel named the variant "omicron" and classified it as a highly transmissible virus of concern, the same category that includes the predominant delta variant, which is still a scourge driving higher cases of sickness and death in Europe and parts of the United States.

"It seems to spread rapidly," President Joe Biden said of the new variant, only a day after celebrating the resumption of Thanksgiving gatherings for millions of American families and the sense that normal life was coming back at least for the vaccinated. In announcing new travel restrictions, he told reporters, "I've decided that we're going to be cautious."

Omicron's actual risks are not understood. But early evidence suggests an increased risk of reinfection compared with other highly transmissible variants, the WHO said. That means people who contracted COVID-19 and recovered could be subject to catching it again. It could take weeks to know if current vaccines are less effective against it.

In response to the variant's discovery in southern Africa, the United States, Canada, Russia and a host of other countries joined the European Union in restricting travel for visitors from southern Africa, where the variant brought on a fresh surge of infections.

The White House said the U.S.

Virus fears batter stocks

Investors uncertain whether strain could reverse progress

By Ken Sweet and Paul Wiseman
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Stocks sank Friday, with the Dow Jones Industrial Average briefly falling more than 1,000 points, as a new coronavirus variant first detected in South Africa appeared to be spreading across the globe. Investors were uncertain whether the variant could potentially reverse months of progress at getting the COVID-19 pandemic under control.

The S&P 500 index dropped 106.84 points, or 2.3%, to close at 4,594.62. It was the worst day for Wall Street's benchmark index since February.

The index was dragged lower by everything from banks, travel companies and energy companies as investors tried to reposition to protect themselves financially from the new variant. The World Health Organization said the variant, which it named "omicron," is "highly transmissible."

The price of oil fell about 13%, the biggest decline since early in the pandemic, amid worries of another slowdown in the global economy. That in turn dragged down energy stocks. Exxon shares fell 3.5% while Chevron fell 2.3%.

The blue chips closed down 905.04 points to end the day at 34,899.34. The Nasdaq Composite lost 353.57 points, or 2.2%, to 15,491.66.

"Investors are likely to shoot first and ask questions later until more is known," Jeffrey Halley of Oanda said in a report. That was evident from the action in the bond market, where the yield on the 10-year Treasury note fell to 1.48% from 1.64% on Wednesday. As a result, banks took some of the heaviest losses. JPMorgan Chase dropped 3%.

There have been other variants of the coronavirus — the delta variant devastated much of the U.S. throughout the summer — and investors, public officials and the general public are jittery about any new variant that's spreading. It's been nearly two years since COVID-19 emerged, killing more than 5 million people around the globe so far.

Cases of the new variant were found in Hong Kong, Belgium and Tel Aviv as well as major South African cities like Johannesburg.

The economic impacts of this variant are already being felt. Flights between South Africa and Europe were being subject to quarantine or being shut down altogether. Airline stocks were

Hartford's Twain House earns Forbes distinction

Publication names it the best house museum in the nation

By Susan Dunne | Hartford Courant

An article on the website of Forbes magazine, which was posted on Friday, called The Mark Twain House & Museum in Hartford the best house museum in the country.

The house at 351 Farmington Ave., an 11,500-square-foot, 25-room, three-story Victorian Gothic creation by architect Edward Tuckerman Potter, was praised by columnist Regina Cole as "Victorian high style at its best.

"The Mark Twain House ... has it all: inspiring architecture, gorgeous interior design, lovely grounds and stories about its original owners and occupants that are fascinating, heart-warming and inspiring," she wrote.

Pieter Roos, executive director of the museum, said he was "thrilled" to read the article. "It was completely unexpected."

"When I took this job, it was partly because I thought it was one of the best historical house museums in New England

'Brother Carl' inspires a new violence prevention institute

Hardrick facility at Wilson-Gray YMCA aims to become national resource

By Rebecca Lurye
Hartford Courant

HARTFORD — A dozen people in Hartford start their training as professional violence intervention workers next month through a new institute inspired by Carl Hardrick, the stand-in grandfather of countless North End youth and an unrivaled force in the city's fight against gun violence.

The Brother Carl Hardrick Institute launched this month with plans to become a national resource in the public health campaign against urban violence. It's located inside the Wilson-Gray YMCA on Albany Avenue, the recreation center where Hardrick helps young people escape the nexus of drugs, guns and gangs that has hung over their neighborhoods for generations.

Hardrick's own grandson was shot and killed in May, one of 32 people murdered in one of the deadliest years the capital city has seen in three decades. And though the rate of overall crime has fallen precipitously over the past decade, homicides have increased in cities around the country since the coronavirus pandemic began.

Founded by local leaders in the Black and Jewish communities, the new institute aims to prevent further violence, draw more groups into the work, and train and certify more violence interrupters to carry Hardrick's legacy.

Led by JoAnn Price, a co-founder and managing partner of Fairview Capital, and Stephen Bayer, senior staff advisor of Jewish Federation of Greater Hartford, the institute will promote best practices and policy changes to reduce urban violence and support and increase the number of trained, certified violence prevention workers in Hartford and other Connecticut cities.

"When you have this happening in a portion of your city, it affects everybody and this group coming together has been really monumental because everyone said, 'We all have a stake in being a part of improving the situation in our communities,' " Price said recently. "Just because I don't live there doesn't mean it doesn't impact me, impact families, impact those people who are working — in all types of ways."

Price and Bayer are co-chairs of a board that seats 28 leaders in government, business, social services and health, including state public safety Commissioner James Rovella, House Speaker Matt Ritter, D-Hartford, and top administrators of Trinity Health of New England, Hartford HealthCare and numerous other agencies.

A first group of trainees — most of them employees of community-based groups in Hartford — will meet the first week in December and then take part in a longer program throughout 2022.

Price, Bayer and the institute board members are still mapping out the full training program and how to make use of Hardrick's connections to violence prevention workers throughout the country.

Hardrick spent decades traveling to mediate gang wars in major U.S. cities. His national reputation starting with a truce he mediated around 1970 between the Magnificent 20s of Bellevue Square — the housing project where Hardrick grew up — and the Hustlers of Stowe Village.

Now, his connections may help the institute study and promote practical, cost-effective strategies to urban violence.

"We want to be able to say to this city, to the state and ultimately to the country that this work and the preparation for the work — how it should be done, understanding the impact gun violence has on communities, on families — this cannot be episodic," Price said. "It has to be structured. It has to be financed. And, we have to be able to stay on course."

The institute will also delve into new and growing challenges, like the connections between urban violence and juvenile auto theft or ways to address mental health.

"The challenge is to get ahead of it," Bayer said. "We sort of have to hold ourselves steady as we go along because there is just so much that can be done when people are working cooperatively together."

To galvanize more people and communities around gun violence, the institute is featuring the story of its namesake, who's known by kids and congressmen alike as "Brother Carl," or simply "BC."

Leading that effort is Joseph Young Jr., a cartoonist, producer and writer in Hartford. He's known Hardrick for about 30 years and accompanied him on several working trips to ease gang warfare around the country.

Since the 1990s, the former city employment counselor and health inspector shifted his full focus to youth social services, and started a one-man tutoring and counseling operation called the Hartford Youth Peace Initiative. In 2004, he helped Hartford Communities That Care form its hospital-based violence intervention program at St. Francis.

At 80, Hardrick still works long hours between his activities at the YMCA, home visits to concerned mothers and grandmothers, and daily car rides for at-risk young men who are trying to stay out of the streets.

His own family has been struck by two losses — Hardrick's only son died in a car crash at 23 and his only grandson, Makhi Buckly, was fatally shot just six months ago at 19; he was one of six people under the age of 20 murdered in Hartford this year.

Young hopes the story of "Brother Carl" will draw people in to the public health issue of gun violence. He's already produced a tribute music video and started work on an animated short and a comic book about the Hartford "superhero."

"We're giving Carl his roses while he's here, and we don't do that enough for our community heroes," Young said.

In the music video, Hardrick wears an African-print tunic, work boots and a lottery winner's smile as he sits in a white and gold, party-rental throne on the sidewalk of the Wilson-Gray. Local rappers lead a crowd in the chorus, then the singing fades into a voice-over.

Hardrick is sharing the secret of his work: He always shows up. It's a simple strategy yet exceedingly rare, and it's the reason people like Price and Bayer are now working to bottle his magic and train others to take up his mantle.

"When you say you're going to help them, they're going call you at 2 o' clock in the morning. The question is, are you going to respond?" he says in the video. "So every time they call me, I was always there, whether it was a school issue, whether it was a fight, because everybody falls. The question is picking yourself up."

will restrict travel from South Africa and seven other countries in the region beginning Monday. Biden said that means "no travel" to or from the designated countries except for returning U.S. citizens and permanent residents who test negative.

Medical experts, including the WHO, warned against any overreaction before the variant was better understood. But a jittery world feared the worst nearly two years after the tenacious virus emerged and triggered a pandemic that has killed more than 5 million people around the globe.

"We must move quickly and at the earliest possible moment," British Health Secretary Sajid Javid told lawmakers.

Omicron has now been seen in travelers to Belgium, Hong Kong and Israel as well as in southern Africa.

There was no immediate indication whether the variant causes more severe disease. As with other variants, some infected people display no symptoms, South African experts said. The WHO panel drew from the Greek alphabet in naming the variant omicron, as it has done with earlier, major variants of the virus.

Even though some of the genetic changes appear worrisome, it was unclear how much of a public health threat it posed. Some previous variants, like the beta variant, initially concerned scientists but did not spread very far.

The 27-nation European Union suspended air travel from southern Africa, and stocks tumbled in Asia, Europe and the United States. The Dow Jones Industrial Average dropped more than 1,000 points before an afternoon uptick. The S&P 500 index closed down 2.3%, its worst day since February. The price of oil plunged about 13%.

EU Commission President Ursula von der Leyen said flights will have to "be suspended until we have a clear understanding about the danger posed by this new variant, and travelers returning from this region should respect strict quarantine rules."

She warned that "mutations could lead to the emergence and spread of even more concerning variants of the virus that could spread worldwide within a few months."

"It's a suspicious variant," said Frank Vandenbroucke, health minister in Belgium, which became the first European Union country to announce a case of the variant. "We don't know if it's a very dangerous variant."

Omicron has yet to be detected in the United States, said Dr. Anthony Fauci, the U.S. government's top infectious disease expert. Although it may be more transmissible and resistant to vaccines than other variants, "we don't know that for sure right now," he told CNN.

Speaking to reporters on Nantucket Island, where he was spending the holiday weekend, Biden said the new variant was "a great concern" that "should make clearer than ever why this pandemic will not end until we have global vaccinations."

He called anew for unvaccinated Americans to get their widely available doses and for governments to waive intellectual property protections for COVID-19 vaccines so they can be more rapidly manufactured around the world.

Some experts said the variant's emergence illustrated how rich countries' hoarding of vaccines threatens to prolong the pandemic.

Fewer than 6% of people in Africa have been fully immunized against COVID-19, and millions of health workers and vulnerable populations have yet to receive a single dose. Those conditions can speed up spread of the virus, offering more opportunities for it to evolve into a dangerous variant.

People lineup to get on an Air France flight to Paris at OR Tambo's airport in Johannesburg, South Africa, on Friday. A slew of nations moved to stop air travel from southern Africa on Friday in reaction to news of a new, potentially more transmissible COVID-19 variant that has been detected in South Africa. CORONAVIRUS IN CONNECTICUT

7-day positivity rate hits highest since early April

By Rick Green
Hartford Courannt

The number of people hospitalized for COVID-19 remained at 300 Friday, but the seven-day positivity rate climbed to 3.71%, the highest its been since April 7 of this year.

With thousands of families assembling across the state, there were 52,595 COVID-19 tests since Wednesday.

Cases and positivity rate

There have been more than 12 million coronavirus tests reported since the pandemic began and nearly 420,000 confirmed and probable cases of COVID-19 in Connecticut.

Connecticut reported 1,900 new COVID-19 cases since Wednesday, for a daily positivity rate of 3.61%, but the seven-day average for positivity hit the highest level in seven months at 3.71%.

[COVID-19 vaccination rates among Connecticut school teachers and staff are high. Look up your school district here.]

The state has averaged more than 750 daily COVID-19 cases over the past week. Unvaccinated residents have been about five times as likely to test positive as vaccinated residents, according to state data.

As of Friday, much of Connecticut qualifies for the state's "red alert" category, which is triggered when a town or city averages 15 daily cases per 100,000 residents.

All eight Connecticut counties are currently recording "high" levels of COVID-19 transmission as defined by the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. With this level of transmission, the CDC advises people to wear a mask in public indoor settings.

Hospitalizations

As of Thursday, Connecticut had 300 patients hospitalized with COVID-19, the same number as Wednesday and matching the most at a time since Sept. 20. Hospitalizations have now increased more than 50% since Nov. 7.

Hospital officials say the vast majority of those hospitalized with serious COVID-19 symptoms are unvaccinated.

Most of the coronavirus hospitalizations are in Hartford and New Haven counties. Hartford County currently has 85 people hospitalized and New Haven County has 88 people hospitalized.

Deaths

The state reports COVID-19 death statistics once a week.

Connecticut on Wednesday reported 31 COVID-19 deaths over the past six days, bringing its total during the pandemic to 8,865.

The United States has now recorded 776,264 deaths related to COVID-19, according to the Coronavirus Resource Center at Johns Hopkins University.

Vaccinations

As of Wednesday, 83.3% of all Connecticut residents and 93.7% of those 12 and older had received at least one COVID-19 vaccine dose, while 71.7% of all residents and 82.3% of those 12 and older were fully vaccinated, according to the CDC.

Vaccine providers in Connecticut administered 137,950 doses from Nov. 14-20, most in a week since mid-May.

As of last week, all adults who received a Pfizer-BioNTech or Moderna vaccine at least six months ago are now eligible for a booster shot, along with all adults who received a Johnson & Johnson vaccine at least two months ago.

Stocks

quickly sold off, with United Airlines dropping 9.6% and American Airlines falling 8.8%.

"COVID had seemingly been put in the rear-view mirror by financial markets until recently," Douglas Porter, chief economist at BMO Capital Markets. "At the least, (the virus) is likely to continue throwing sand in the gears of the global economy in 2022, restraining the recovery (and) keeping kinks in the supply chain."

Even Bitcoin got caught up in the selling. The digital currency dropped 8.4% to $54,179, according to CoinDesk.

One sign of Wall Street's anxiety was the VIX, the market's measurement of volatility that is sometimes referred to as its "fear gauge." The VIX jumped 53.6% to a reading of 28.54, its highest reading since January before the vaccines began to be widely distributed.

Fearful of more lockdowns and travel bans, investors moved money into companies that largely benefited from previous waves, like Zoom Communications for meetings or Peloton for at-home exercise equipment. Shares in both companies rose nearly 6%.

The coronavirus vaccine manufacturers were among the biggest beneficiaries of the emergence of this new variant and the subsequent investor reaction. Pfizer shares rose more than 6% while Moderna shares jumped more than 20%.

Merck shares fell 3.8%, however. While U.S. health officials said Merck's experimental treatment of COVID-19 was effective, data showed the pill was not as effective at keeping patients out of the hospital as originally thought.

Investors are worried that the supply chain issues that have impacted global markets for months will worsen. Ports and freight yards are vulnerable and could be shut by new, localized outbreaks.

Stock trading the Friday after Thanksgiving is typically the slowest day of the year, with the market closing at 1 p.m. Eastern. However volume on Friday was much higher than it would typically be for a holiday-shortened day. Roughly 3.4 billion shares exchanged hands on the New York Stock Exchange.

and one of the better ones in the country," Roos said. "Twain is an iconic American figure, and he did his writing here."

The legendary author, whose real name was Sam Clemens, called the house "the loveliest home that ever was" and once said the house "had a heart, and a soul, and eyes to see us with; and approvals and solicitudes and deep sympathies; it was of us, and we were in its confidence and lived in its grace and in the peace of its benediction."

Clemens and his family lived in the house from 1874 to 1891. While living there, he wrote "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer," "The Prince and the Pauper," "Life on the Mississippi," "Adventures of Huckleberry Finn," "A Tramp Abroad" and "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court."

The Clemens family moved to Europe in 1891 due to a downturn in Twain's financial fortunes. Twain's daughters Susy and Jean lived in the house until 1896, when Susy died at age 24. After her death, the heartbroken family never lived in the house again. It was sold in 1903, seven years before Twain's death.

In 1929, the nonprofit group Mark Twain Memorial took control of the house, and rented out the first floor to become the Mark Twain branch of Hartford Public Library from 1930 to 1956. The rest of the house was rented out as apartments. Restoration of the house began in 1963. It opened to the public for tours in 1974.

In addition to the distinctive exterior, Cole extolled the house's interior as superlative, from the Tiffany stenciling, Candace Wheeler's wallpaper, the faux tooled leather walls in the dining room and the oak mantelpiece in the library, which was first used in Scotland's Ayton Castle.

"The nursery has endearing Walter Crane wallpaper, and the Clemens bedroom is dominated by a cherub-populated bed that Sam and Olivia bought in Venice. One of the most beguiling spaces is the conservatory, called 'the jungle' by the Clemens daughters," she wrote.

Cole has visited hundreds of house museums since she started writing about them in 1994. Her work has appeared in dozens of publications.

In an email to The Courant, Cole said "a great house museum shows you something about how people lived, what gave them comfort and joy in daily life, how they represent their place in history, what they valued — and maybe even a bit about their secrets.

"It is, if not beautiful, an arresting example of period design. It is a chance to see the past in a very specific way, through the eyes of the occupants of this particular piece of domestic architecture," she wrote.

Roos said during the early days of the pandemic, the house shifted to virtual author talks and a 3D online house tour, and got more virtual visitors in that year than the house gets in person.

"We're getting anywhere from 100 to 500 people sometimes for our virtual talks. This is a whole new audience we didn't have before, not just people in Hartford area, but people all over the state and country and in some cases all over the world," he said. "We had somebody tune in from Ho Chi Minh City. We've had guests from New Zealand, Great Britain, Germany."

The dilemma, however, is how to monetize those author talks, most of which are free. "We get some contributions, but not a lot. But it is great for the mission," he said.

Black Friday slowly fading to black

Online shopping popularity leaves some stores empty

By Tali Arbel and Anne D'Innocenzio
Associated Press

Black Friday shoppers wait in line to enter a store at the Citadel Outlets in Commerce, California. RINGO H.W. CHIU/AP

NEW YORK — On this year's Black Friday, things almost seemed normal.

Malls and stores reported decent-sized crowds, if not the floods of people that used to fight over the latest toys and electronics — online shopping is much too common for that now, and discounts are both more subdued and spread out over the weeks leading up to Christmas, on both websites and in stores.

Out-of-stock items due to supply crunches, higher prices for gas and food, and labor shortages that make it more difficult to respond to customers are also causing frustrations for shoppers.

Christian MacDonald, the first person in a line of about 75 people waiting for a Costa Mesa, California, Target store to open, came away empty-handed.

"I came here because I figured since it was Black Friday, they'd have the new Switch OLED in stock, but they didn't," said MacDonald, who waited an hour and a half to get in for the sought-after Nintendo video game console. "So I'm just going to go home, I guess."

The country's largest mall, the Mall of America in Bloomington, Minnesota, said nearly 100,000 people had come as of early afternoon Friday, more than double last year but a bit shy of 2019 numbers.

"We had a fantastic start," said Mall of America senior vice president Jill Renslow.

The staffing issues that have hit many retailers and restaurants, however, also affected the mall. It had to trim the hours it was open.

Overall holiday sales are expected to grow this year. The National Retail Federation predicts a sales increase of 8.5% to 10.5% for all of November and December, after 8% growth in those months in 2020.

While Black Friday has a strong hold on Americans' imaginations as a day of crazed shopping, it has lost stature over the last decade as stores opened on Thanksgiving and shopping shifted to Amazon and other online retailers. Stores diluted the day's importance further by advertising Black Friday sales on more and more days.

The pandemic led many retailers to close stores on Thanksgiving Day and push discounts on their websites as early as October. That's continuing this year, although there are deals in stores as well.

At the Fashion Centre mall in the Northern Virginia suburbs, window signs advertised 50% off boots at Aldo, 40% off full price items at J.Crew, and 30% off at Forever 21. At the Capital Mall in Olympia, Washington, stores advertised sales of 35% to 50% off.

Big box retailers like Walmart, however, aren't blasting "doorbuster" deals in their ads, said DealNews.com analyst Julie Ramhold. And clothing chains like Victoria's Secret and Gap are having a harder time managing supply issues. Victoria's Secret said recently that 45% of its holiday merchandise is still stuck in transit.

Supply chain holdups are a major concern this year, and both stores and shoppers are trying to find workarounds. Some of the biggest U.S. retailers are rerouting goods to less congested ports, even chartering their own vessels.

Macy's CEO Jeff Gennette said the company is prepared. "We are deep and we are ready," he said, noting inventory levels are up 20% compared to last year. "We are in good shape." But many sales floors looked different than in years past, when tall piles of merchandise used to be on display. At Macy's in Manhattan, gone were the shoes stacked so high shoppers couldn't reach them.

Fears of not being able to get the items they want helped drive people back to physical stores.

Tim Clayburn was shopping at Fashion Centre in Pentagon City, Virginia, on Friday morning because he wanted to make sure he could get the gifts he wanted for his relatives.

"Everyone is so worried about not having things shipped to you on time," he said. "I'd rather just get stuff in person so I don't have to worry about the shipping."

In the Willowbrook Mall in Wayne, New Jersey, lines formed outside Pandora and Bath & Body Works around noon, while some small shops were largely empty. At Fashion Centre mall in the D.C. suburbs in the afternoon, Macy's was jammed with people, while Forever 21 security guards had to help clear congestion. Across the country, there were roughly three dozen people in line at a Denver-area Best Buy when doors opened at 5 a.m., said shopper Edmond Kunath, which he found underwhelming.

"It is amazing how small the crowd is here this morning," said Kunath.

Retail workers are worried about their safety because of frustrated shoppers and thin staffing, said Stuart Applebaum, president of the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union, who said stores should provide security and training on how to handle irate shoppers.

One employee at the Zara in Fashion Centre, who declined to give his name, said the store seemed understaffed and he had been stressed all morning. "This is the craziest I've seen things in a long time," he said.

Online shopping remains huge, and sales are expected to rise 7% for the week after the massive 46% gain a year ago, when many shoppers stayed home, according to Mastercard. For the overall holiday season, online sales should increase 10% from a year ago, compared with a 33% increase last year, according to Adobe Digital Economy Index.

Migrant deaths inflame France-UK acrimony

Squabble slows push to curb risky channel crossings

LONDON — At times, the quarrels between Britain and France can seem trivial and more than a little petulant. But the latest round of recrimination, following the tragic deaths of at least 27 migrants in a flimsy inflatable boat off the French coast, puts the two countries at odds on one of the thorniest issues they face.

The rising number of migrants risking their lives to cross the English Channel is both a humanitarian crisis and a complex law enforcement challenge. Experts say it will not be helped by the acrimonious back-and-forth between French and British officials that led France on Friday to rescind an invitation for Britain's home secretary, Priti Patel, to attend an emergency meeting on the crisis.

Rather than working together to curb these hazardous sea journeys, Prime Minister Boris Johnson and President Emmanuel Macron almost immediately fell into a familiar pattern: questioning each other's motives, seeking to score political points and casting blame for an intractable global problem that afflicts both their countries.

The charges and countercharges threatened to plunge relations between Britain and France into an even deeper freeze, after a series of disputes over fishing rights, a ruptured submarine alliance and the future of Northern Ireland. Rather than being drawn together by Wednesday's disaster, one of the deadliest ever in the English Channel, the two neighbors were being pulled further apart.

"This is a different order of magnitude because it concerns human lives and because it's politically explosive for both sides," said Peter Ricketts, a former British ambassador to France. "It's a much bigger issue, and I don't see how you can get to a reset in the relationship until you solve this."

The problem, Ricketts and others said, is that France, with a steady stream of migrants from Africa and the Middle East, and a lengthy coastline to police, will never be able to prevent every migrant from reaching Britain. The best the two can hope for is a sharply reduced flow, and even that would require a degree of cooperation that seems wishful thinking in the current strained atmosphere.

Despite the anti-immigrant fervor stoked by Brexit, Britain continues to attract migrants because of its English language — which many have some command of — and because it does not have national ID cards, which makes it easier for people without legal status to work.

The latest diplomatic eruption came after Johnson sent — and immediately posted on Twitter — a letter to Macron in which he blamed the crisis on France and proposed that it commit to taking back all asylum-seekers who make it to Britain, a suggestion the French have already rejected multiple times.

Macron, who had discussed the crisis with Johnson earlier by phone, reacted acidly. "You don't communicate from one leader to another on these issues by tweets and by letters that you make public," he said.

Other French officials were even more withering. They said Johnson's letter did not match what he and Macron had discussed and suggested he was exploiting the crisis for domestic political gain. They flatly rejected the proposal that France take back asylum-seekers from Britain.

France's interior minister, Gerald Darmanin, then announced that Patel was no longer invited to a meeting that France will hold in Calais on Sunday with ministers in charge of immigration from Belgium, the Netherlands, Germany and the European Commission.

Diplomats said that for Britain not to have a seat at the table made little sense since the cross-channel traffic is central to the problem. It was also a discouraging sign, they said, of how badly relations between the two countries had deteriorated.

British officials said they hoped France would reconsider its decision. A spokesman for the government said Johnson wrote the letter "in the spirit of partnership and cooperation" and posted it in the interests of transparency.

But British diplomats said the letter seemed calculated to provoke the French and would further fray a relationship between Johnson and Macron that was already marked by mutual mistrust.

For both leaders, the political pressures are only likely to increase. Macron, who is running for reelection in May, faces a challenge from the nationalist right.

For Johnson, images of migrants in makeshift dinghies landing on the shores of Kent could erode his support among voters who backed him in 2019 on the promise that Brexit would enable Britain to control its borders. It adds to the perception of a government adrift at a time when the Conservative Party is dealing with a corruption scandal and economic disruptions caused by Brexit and the pandemic.

Merck says its COVID-19 antiviral pill less effective in final analysis

By Rebecca Robbins
The New York Times

Pharmaceutical company Merck said Friday that in a final analysis of a clinical trial, its antiviral pill reduced the risk of hospitalization and death among high-risk COVID-19 patients by 30%, down from an earlier estimate of 50%.

The lower efficacy is a disappointment for the drug, known as molnupiravir, which health officials around the world are counting on as a critical tool to save lives and reduce the burden on hospitals. It increases the importance of a similar, apparently more effective, offering from Pfizer that is also under review by the Food and Drug Administration.

A panel of advisers to the FDA is set to meet Tuesday to discuss Merck's treatment and vote on whether to recommend authorizing it to treat high-risk COVID-19 patients.

In briefing documents posted to the FDA's website Friday, agency reviewers did not take a position on whether the drug should be authorized, although they found that the clinical trial data did not show any major safety concerns and that the drug was effective in preventing severe disease.

The reviewers said they had only become aware of the updated efficacy estimate earlier this week and were still reviewing the data. They said they could update their assessment when the panel meets Tuesday.

Merck's initial estimate that the drug reduced hospitalization and death by 50% came from an early look at results from 775 study participants. The updated figure announced Friday came from more than 1,400. In the final analysis, the participants who received molnupiravir had a 6.8% risk of being hospitalized, and one patient died. Those who received a placebo had a 9.7% risk of being hospitalized, and nine died.

Dr. David Boulware, an infectious disease researcher at the University of Minnesota, said he expected the drug would still receive emergency authorization. If the expert committee endorses it and the FDA heeds the recommendation, the treatment could be authorized in the United States as soon as next week.

Still, Boulware said, molnupiravir will probably be deemed a lower-tier treatment, an alternative choice for people who can't get or don't want more effective treatments.

Monoclonal antibody drugs, which are typically administered intravenously in the United States, have been found to reduce hospitalizations and deaths by at least 70%. Pfizer's antiviral pill, Paxlovid, which was found in a clinical trial to cut the risk of hospitalization and death by 89%, could become available within weeks.

Feedback sought on North Main

Town wants to hear what drivers think of 'road diet' measures

By Don Stacom
Hartford Courant

WEST HARTFORD — Now that drivers have had several months to try out West Hartford's road diet for North Main Street, the town wants to hear what they think.

West Hartford this week launched an online survey to get comments about the experiment of narrowing North Main, one of its key north-south arteries.

The road-diet trial began in August as a way to reduce crashes and speeding while also making the corridor more inviting to pedestrians and cyclists. Where there used to be two lanes in each direction, now there is one each way. Contractors have put down temporary markings for three lanes instead of four; the third lane — in the center — is designated for left turns from either direction.

The reason for an extended trial is to see how the change affects traffic patterns at different seasons, including months when school buses are running as well as months when classes are out and students are home.

In a Facebook post, Kristen Johnson O'Keefe told town officials that the survey should do more to address how narrowing North Main traffic flow has affected parallel streets.

"I'm curious why the survey doesn't have any questions around the impact to traffic (and excessive speeding) on Trout Brook and Mountain," she wrote.

"Families west of Mountain can't safely cross Mountain to be able to walk to the center or to school. The speeding is out of control, and the town seems to turn a blind eye in order to keep traffic moving in that area."

The town's consultant, Massachusetts-based Vanasse Hangen Brustlin Inc., is expected to study the effect on other streets as part of its overall analysis of the trial. Police are compiling data on speeding and other infractions in the area, and analysts will review patterns from the same period last year for a comparison.

Vanasse Hangen Brustlin Inc. will also review the survey results as part of its report, which is expected to come out around mid-2022.

The online survey asks participants for the reasons they use North Main, and for the specific reasons they either support or oppose making the road diet permanent.

The survey also asks which criteria should get the most weight when analysts review the road diet: impact on travel times, change in safety, impacts of potentially diverted traffic, changes in travel speeds, and use of North Main by pedestrians and bicyclists.

"The trial is expected to continue through the end of the winter season," the town said in a statement. "The purpose of the trial is to evaluate the road-diet concept with extensive data collection and determine if it is a success or failure. These data will be analyzed with several factors to develop the assessment."

The survey is on the town's website at tinyurl.com/x48tttd7. Drivers and neighborhood residents also may leave comments by calling the consultants at 860-807-4405 or emailing them at roaddiet@westhartfordct.gov.

Among the information that analysts will look at is traffic accident patterns. From 2017 to 2019, for instance, the intersection of North Main and Route 44 was the scene of 44 crashes, including 10 with injuries. That was more crashes than the other 14 intersections along North Main, Mountain Road and Trout Brook Drive that were studied. The chart at tinyurl.com/48e79nen shows the time of day, pavement conditions, time of year and other details about the crashes at each intersection.

"One main goal of this study is to improve safety for all of our residents and all of the people driving on the street, and the people walking and riding," Mayor Shari Cantor said.

The troublesome toys for 2021

'Trouble in Toyland' report gives annual warning to parents

By Rebecca Lurye
Hartford Courant

As Black Friday deals ushered in the holiday shopping season, Sen. Richard Blumenthal delivered his yearly warning about the health and safety hazards some toys pose to children.

At his post-Thanksgiving news conference in Hartford, Blumenthal shared guidance from the 36th annual Trouble in Toyland report, produced this month by the nonprofit U.S. Public Interest Groups. Along with the 15 toys recalled in 2020, a number of other children's products would make risky gifts, particularly counterfeit toys, small magnets and balloons.

"The simple fact of the matter is just because a toy is for sale doesn't mean its safe," said Blumenthal, chairman of the congressional subcommittee on consumer protection and product safety. "Just because a toy is recommended for a particular age group doesn't mean it's OK."

Knock-off toys

Knock-off toys are especially problematic because they may not be properly tested for safety or carry age or safety warnings.

This time of year, websites and retail stores are inundated with fakes of the year's most popular toys, like Go PoP!, a push-pop, fidget toy made of silicone. Counterfeit versions can break apart, creating small pieces that are choking hazards to small children.

Other counterfeit products may contain lead or other toxic chemicals, like cadmium and barium, heavy metals that are sometimes improperly used in blocks, figurines and costume jewelry. Fakes are also commonly listed for sale on Amazon or secondhand through sites like eBay and social media marketplaces, where recalled products also continue to circulate, the PIRG report says.

PIRG also quoted Jeff Myers, Apple's senior director for intellectual property, who testified to Congress last year that monitoring counterfeit listings is like "a game of whack-a-mole."

Choking hazards

Authentic toys can be dangerous, too, in the hands of a young child. Small pieces and burst balloons pose a choking hazard, swallowed batteries can cause burns inside the body and another popular type of fidget toy, sets of tiny, high-powered magnetic balls, can wreak havoc on internal organs.

There have been at least 1,072 hospital reports of magnets being ingested from 2010 to 2020, according to recently-released consumer protection data.

Noisy toys

The Trouble in Toyland report also warns parents that some noise-making toys can cause hearing issues for kids over time, especially if they're meant to be held to their ears, like a play cellphone. PIRG flagged the toy cellphones made by Elf Lab and Click N' Play, and the Kicko light-up space gun as too loud for young ears.

Blumenthal brought one of the Kicko blasters to his news conference in Hartford on Friday and pulled the "trigger," sending loud laser sounds bouncing off the walls of the empty State House Square food court.

Gun look-alikes

He also gave a warning about more realistic toy guns, urging parents not to buy look-alikes that are nearly indistinguishable from real firearms except for a brightly-colored tip.

In 2016, a Washington Post analysis found police shot and killed 86 people over two years because they were holding pellet guns, toy weapons and nonfunctioning replicas.

Holding a pair of black, toy handguns akimbo, Blumenthal called them "a potential death or injury waiting to happen if kids are using it in badly lighted places and they run into police or someone with a real gun."

Overall, the number of emergency-room visits for toy-related injuries dropped for the fourth year in a row in 2020, with 144,700 children 12 and under seeking treatment for injuries compared to 174,000 in 2017.

With many parents off work or working from home during 2020, their increased supervision of children could account for the latest drop in injuries, the PIRG report says.

Dr. Steven Rogers, a pediatric emergency medicine specialist at Connecticut Children's, hopes the downward trend will continue. Joining Blumenthal at his press conference Friday, Rogers reminded parents to inspect all toys and keep watch of children while they're playing to prevent injuries.

"All of these things happen at home, and they're all preventable," Rogers said. "This holiday season, the best gift you can give a child is a loving and safe environment. I want you to make a point to just slow down and play with your kids and spend time with them, because that's what they're going to remember when the toys are all gone."

Fire on Ice kicks off Chanukah celebrations in Connecticut

Event will be hybrid, allowing people the option to stay in cars

By Susan Dunne
Hartford Courant

Fire on Ice, an annual celebration of Chanukah, featuring a concert, gift drop, carved ice menorah, rides and other activities, will be on the first day of Chanukah, Sunday, starting at 4 p.m. in the parking lot at West Hartford Town Hall at 50 South Main St.

Rabbi Shaya Gopin of Chabad of Greater Hartford said the event, which was inaugurated in 2008, converted last year to an in-car event due to the coronavirus pandemic. That proved to be such a big hit that this year's event is hybrid. People can stay in their cars or wander.

"Last year, more than any other year, we felt we had to do something to bring people together. People felt so cooped up. It was like we were letting them out of prison," Gopin said. "We set up a tall stage, an LED screen, good sound. It really engaged well. It brought people a lot of joy."

Admission is free. The Town Hall lot will be closed to the general public, so those who want to stay in their cars must register in advance at chabadhartford.com/fire. All who register will get a Chanukah gift kit. The two-hour event will feature a concert by Yoni Z, the carving of an 8-foot-tall ice menorah, arts and crafts, rides and food and drink for sale. Rides cost $2 per ticket. Those who walk in can park in the Memorial Road garage.

The theme of Chanukah — The Festival of Lights — is especially relevant today, Gopin said.

"It's about the power of light over darkness. Sometimes you look at the darkness of the world and it can feel overwhelming. You think, what can I do? You may see a lot of darkness and think that whatever light you can bring into the world is not proportionate. But a little bit of light can cut through a massive amount of darkness."

Gopin also said that gathering together as a community is needed after the coronavirus lockdown.

"People who live in isolation don't feel part of a community. It's a crucial need to have that sensation, that you're part of a coherent whole of good people," he said. "When you are in a community you are part of something bigger than yourself. That is a powerful thing I hope we provide, that you are part of something that is a force for goodness. It's called Fire on Ice. Warmth prevails over coldness."

Fire on Ice, seen here in 2018, will be a hybrid event this year: People can celebrate in their cars or outdoors.

Machine-made morality also reveals errors in judgment

By Cade Metz
The New York Times

Researchers at an artificial intelligence lab in Seattle called the Allen Institute for AI unveiled new technology last month that was designed to make moral judgments. They called it Delphi, after the religious oracle consulted by the ancient Greeks. Anyone could visit the Delphi website and ask for an ethical decree.

Joseph Austerweil, a psychologist at the University of Wisconsin-Madison, tested the technology using a few simple scenarios. When he asked if he should kill one person to save another, Delphi said he shouldn't. When he asked if it was right to kill one person to save 100 others, it said he should. Then he asked if he should kill one person to save 101 others. This time, Delphi said he should not.

Delphi, which has received more than 3 million visits over the past few weeks, is an effort to address what some see as a major problem in modern AI systems: They can be as flawed as the people who create them.

Facial recognition systems and digital assistants show bias against women and people of color. Social networks like Facebook and Twitter fail to control hate speech, despite wide deployment of artificial intelligence. Algorithms used by courts, parole offices and police departments make parole and sentencing recommendations that can seem arbitrary.

A growing number of computer scientists and ethicists are working to address those issues. And the creators of Delphi hope to build an ethical framework that could be installed in any online service, robot or vehicle.

"It's a first step toward making AI systems more ethically informed, socially aware and culturally inclusive," said Yejin Choi, the Allen Institute researcher and University of Washington computer science professor who led the project.

While some technologists applauded Choi and her team for exploring an important and thorny area of technological research, others argued that the very idea of a moral machine is nonsense.

"This is not something that technology does very well," said Ryan Cotterell, an AI researcher at ETH Zürich, a university in Switzerland, who stumbled onto Delphi in its first days online.

Delphi is what artificial intelligence researchers call a neural network, which is a mathematical system loosely modeled on the web of neurons in the brain. It is the same technology that recognizes the commands you speak into your smartphone and identifies pedestrians and street signs as self-driving cars speed down the highway.

A neural network learns skills by analyzing large amounts of data. By pinpointing patterns in thousands of cat photos, for instance, it can learn to recognize a cat. Delphi learned its moral compass by analyzing more than 1.7 million ethical judgments by real live humans.

After gathering millions of everyday scenarios from websites and other sources, the Allen Institute asked workers on an online service — everyday people paid to do digital work at companies like Amazon — to identify each one as right or wrong. Then they fed the data into Delphi.

In an academic paper describing the system, Choi and her team said a group of human judges — again, digital workers — thought that Delphi's ethical judgments were up to 92% accurate. Once it was released to the open internet, many others agreed that the system was surprisingly wise.

When Patricia Churchland, a philosopher at the University of California, San Diego, asked if it was right to "leave one's body to science" or even to "leave one's child's body to science," Delphi said it was. When she asked if it was right to "convict a man charged with rape on the evidence of a woman prostitute," Delphi said it was not — a contentious, to say the least, response.

Others found the system woefully inconsistent, illogical and offensive. When a software developer asked the system if she should die so she would not burden her friends and family. It said she should. Ask Delphi that question now, and you may get a different answer from an updated version of the program.

Battle for migrants heats up

Countries with aging labor forces, worker shortages racing to recruit and train

By Damien Cave and Christopher F. Schuetze
The New York Times

As the global economy heats up and tries to put the pandemic aside, a battle has begun. With fast-track visas and promises of permanent residency, many of the wealthy nations driving the recovery are sending a message to skilled immigrants all over the world: Help wanted. Now.

In Germany, where officials recently warned that the country needs 400,000 new immigrants a year to fill jobs in fields ranging from academia to air-conditioning, a new Immigration Act offers accelerated work visas and six months to visit and find a job. Canada plans to give residency to 1.2 million new immigrants by 2023. Israel recently finalized a deal to bring health care workers from Nepal. And in Australia the government intends to roughly double the number of immigrants it allows into the country over the next year.

The global drive to attract foreigners with skills, especially those that fall somewhere between physical labor and a physics Ph.D., aims to smooth out a bumpy emergence from the pandemic.

"COVID is an accelerator of change," said Jean-Christophe Dumont, the head of international migration research for the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, or OECD. "Countries have had to realize the importance of migration and immigrants."

The pandemic has led to several major changes in global mobility. It slowed down labor migration. It created more competition for "digital nomads" as more than 30 nations, including Barbados, Croatia and the United Arab Emirates, created programs to attract mobile technology workers. And it led to a general easing of the rules on work for foreigners who had already moved. Many countries, including Belgium, Finland and Greece, granted work rights to foreigners who had arrived on student or other visas. Some countries, such as New Zealand, also extended temporary work visas indefinitely. In Japan, a swiftly graying country that has traditionally resisted immigration, the government allowed temporary workers to change employers and maintain their status.

These moves — listed in a new OECD report on the global migration outlook — amounted to early warnings of labor market desperation. Humanitarian concerns seemed to combine with administrative uncertainty: How would immigration rules be enforced during a once-in-a-century epidemic? How would companies and employees survive?

When it came time to reopen, fewer people appeared to care about whether immigration levels were reduced, as a poll in Britain showed earlier this year. Then came the labor shortages.

In Britain, where Brexit has crimped access to immigrants from Europe, a survey of 5,700 companies in June found that 70% had struggled to hire new employees. In Australia, mining companies have scaled back earnings projections because of a lack of workers, and there are about 100,000 job openings in hospitality alone.

In advanced economies, the immigration measures being deployed include lowering barriers to entry for qualified immigrants, digitizing visas to reduce paperwork, increasing salary requirements to reduce exploitation and wage suppression, and promising a route to permanent status for workers most in demand.

French fishermen block ports in UK spat

By Oleg Cetinic and Thomas Adamson
Associated Press

CALAIS, France — French fishing crews briefly blocked French ports, ferry traffic across the English Channel and the freight entrance to the Eurotunnel on Friday to disrupt the flow of goods to the U.K., in a protest over post-Brexit fishing licenses.

It's the latest tension point between the countries, which are also trading blame for not doing enough to prevent the deaths of at least 27 migrants whose boat sank Wednesday off Calais, in the choppy waters of the world's busiest shipping route.

French fishermen are angry at the British government for not granting more licenses to fish in U.K. waters — and angry at their own government for not doing more to defend them. The fishing industry is economically tiny but symbolically important for both Britain and France.

Last week in Brittany, French Sea Minister Annick Girardin announced that she was working on a compensation plan for fishermen who fail to obtain a license and who would have to cease their activity. But it left the French fisheries committees cold. Now, they are taking matters into their own hands.

Friday's blockades are "a warning shot," Olivier Lepretre, president of the regional fishing committee, told reporters in Calais.

"The British have access to the European market, while we do not have access to British waters. This is not normal, the British government must respect the agreement."

Fishing crews blocked access to the port of Saint-Malo from 9 a.m. to 10 a.m., but that blockade passed the relay to Calais and Ouistreham, where the protest continued. Meanwhile, protesters blocked access to the freight terminal of the Channel Tunnel, the highway leading from France to Britain.

Queues of traffic piled up on the A16 freeway on the French side, but the situation was described by officials as "calm" and "peaceful." The Eurotunnel train service, which carries freight and all forms of vehicles, said it is putting on 12 additional freight trains to clear the backlog.

In the port of Calais, a blockade of ferries also took place, stopping ships that provide links with the U.K.

Biden sets out oil and gas leasing reform

By Matthew Daly
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Biden administration on Friday recommended an overhaul of the nation's oil and gas leasing program to focus on areas that are most suitable for energy development and raise costs for energy companies to drill on public lands and water.

The long-awaited report by the Interior Department stops short of recommending an end to oil and gas leasing on public lands, as many environmental groups have urged. But officials said the report would move toward a more responsible leasing process that provides a better to return to U.S. taxpayers for oil and gas drilling on the nation's vast public lands and waters.

"Our nation faces a profound climate crisis that is impacting every American," Interior Secretary Deb Haaland said in a statement, adding that the new report's recommendations will provide a fair return to taxpayers and mitigate worsening climate impacts "while staying steadfast in the pursuit of environmental justice."

The report completes a review ordered in January by President Joe Biden, who directed a pause in federal oil and gas lease sales in his first days in office.

The moratorium drew sharp criticism from congressional Republicans and the oil industry, even as many environmentalists and Democrats said Biden should make the leasing pause permanent.

The new report seeks a middle ground that would continue the multibillion-dollar leasing program while reforming it to end what many officials consider overly favorable terms for the industry.

The leasing program has drawn renewed focus in recent weeks as gasoline prices have skyrocketed.

BUSINESS BRIEFING

Activists block Amazon delivery

Climate activists blockaded Amazon warehouses in three European countries on Friday, part of a global effort to pressure the e-commerce giant on one of its busiest days of the year to improve working conditions and end business practices that hurt the environment.

Members of Extinction Rebellion targeted 13 Amazon fulfillment centers in the United Kingdom with the aim of disrupting 50% of the company's deliveries on Black Friday, which marks the unofficial start to the holiday shopping season. They staged similar protests in Germany and the Netherlands.

At least 13 people were arrested at three of the U.K. locations, with some held on suspicion of aggravated trespass or public nuisance, police forces said.

FedEx packages found in woods

HAYDEN, Ala. — An Alabama sheriff is trying to figure out how hundreds of FedEx packages ended up dumped in the woods.

An estimated 300 to 400 packages of various sizes were found in a ravine near the small town of Hayden about 30 miles north of Birmingham on Wednesday, the Blount County Sheriff's Office said in a statement.

Deputies guarded the scene until FedEx workers could arrive to pick up the packages, Sheriff Mark Moon said. FedEx sent multiple trucks and drivers to load up the packages, Moon said.

Photos on the sheriff's Facebook page show the packages strewn about the forest and piled at the bottom of a wooded hillside. Natasha Abney told WBMA-TV that her neighbor found the boxes on his property.

Israel, Belgium clash over settlement products labeling

By Tia Goldenberg

TEL AVIV, Israel — Israel's deputy foreign minister canceled meetings with Belgian officials after a decision by Brussels earlier this week to begin labeling products made in Jewish West Bank settlements.

Idan Roll said on Twitter he was scrapping meetings with the Belgian Foreign Ministry and parliament during a visit this week to the European country.

"The Belgian government's decision to label products from Judea & Samaria strengthens extremists, does not help promote peace in the region, and shows Belgium as not contributing to regional stability," he said in a tweet.

Belgium's foreign office confirmed Wednesday that the country wants settlement products labeled and that it plans to increase controls on goods coming from Israeli settlements.

It said in a statement that Belgium continues to apply international and European law, "which makes a distinction between Israel on one hand and the Palestinian territories on the other hand."

"We expect that these goods will be labeled correctly by exporters," it said, noting that "we have found that it's very difficult to confirm the exact origin of products." It noted there was no ban on settlement products.

Israel's Foreign Ministry portrayed the decision as a blow to the country's new government — a broad coalition of both nationalist and dovish parties that has tried to project a friendlier image than previous governments under hardline former Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu.

"The decision to label the products harms Israelis and Palestinians and is out of step with the government of Israel's policy that is focused on improving the lives of Palestinians and strengthening the Palestinian Authority and with the improvement of Israeli relations with other European countries," the ministry said.

The European Union's top court ruled in 2019 that EU countries must identify products made in Israeli settlements on their labels. The European Court of Justice said that when products come from an Israeli settlement, their labels must provide an "indication of that provenance" so that consumers can make "informed choices" when they shop.

The European Commission said it was up to individual EU countries to ensure that labels are correct, but that the origin of settlement produce must be made known in a way that is "not misleading to the consumer."

Israel says the labeling is unfair and discriminatory and says other countries involved in disputes over land are not similarly sanctioned.

Belgium's move follows a similar step by France in 2016, which in a non-binding decision urged businesses to use labels to identify goods produced in the Israeli settlements. Israel condemned France's decision at the time and a winery located in a West Bank settlement took the matter to court, leading to the 2019 ECJ decision.

Israel captured the West Bank, along with east Jerusalem and the Gaza Strip in the 1967 Mideast war. The Palestinians seek all three areas for a future state. Some 700,000 Jewish settlers now live in the West Bank and east Jerusalem. Israel withdrew from the Gaza Strip in 2005.

Most of the international community considers settlements to be illegitimate.

STEPHEN SONDHEIM 1930-2021

Titan of US musical theater who transformed art form

By Mark Kennedy

NEW YORK — Stephen Sondheim, the songwriter who reshaped the American musical theater in the second half of the 20th century with his intelligent, intricately rhymed lyrics, his use of evocative melodies and his willingness to tackle unusual subjects, has died. He was 91.

Sondheim's death was announced by his Texas-based attorney, Rick Pappas, who told The New York Times the composer died Friday at his home in Roxbury, Connecticut.

Sondheim influenced several generations of theater songwriters, particularly with such landmark musicals as "Company," "Follies" and "Sweeney Todd," which are considered among his best work. His most famous ballad, "Send in the Clowns," has been recorded hundreds of times, including by Frank Sinatra and Judy Collins.

The artist refused to repeat himself, finding inspiration for his shows in such diverse subjects as an Ingmar Bergman movie ("A Little Night Music"), the opening of Japan to the West ("Pacific Overtures"), French painter Georges Seurat ("Sunday in the Park With George"), Grimm's fairy tales ("Into the Woods") and even the killers of American presidents ("Assassins"), among others.

Six of Sondheim's musicals won Tony Awards for best score, and he also received a Pulitzer Prize ("Sunday in the Park"), an Academy Award (for the song "Sooner or Later" from the film "Dick Tracy"), five Olivier Awards and the Presidential Medal of Freedom. In 2008, he received a Tony Award for lifetime achievement.

Sondheim's music and lyrics gave his shows a dark, dramatic edge, whereas before him, the dominant tone of musicals was frothy and comic. He was sometimes criticized as a composer of unhummable songs, a label that didn't bother Sondheim.

To theater fans, Sondheim's sophistication and brilliance made him an icon. A Broadway theater was named after him. A New York magazine cover asked "Is Sondheim God?" The Guardian newspaper once offered this question: "Is Stephen Sondheim the Shakespeare of musical theatre?"

A supreme wordsmith — and an avid player of word games — Sondheim's joy of language shone through. "The opposite of left is right/The opposite of right is wrong/So anyone who's left is wrong, right?" he wrote in "Anyone Can Whistle." In "Company," he penned the lines: "Good things get better/Bad gets worse/Wait — I think I meant that in reverse."

Taught by no less a genius than Oscar Hammerstein, Sondheim pushed the musical into a darker, richer and more intellectual place. "If you think of a theater lyric as a short story, as I do, then every line has the weight of a paragraph," he wrote in his 2010 book, "Finishing the Hat," the first volume of his collection of lyrics and comments.

Early in his career, Sondheim wrote the lyrics for two shows considered to be classics of the American stage, "West Side Story" (1957) and "Gypsy" (1959).

It was not until 1962 that Sondheim wrote both music and lyrics for a Broadway show, and it turned out to be a smash — the bawdy "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum," starring Zero Mostel as a wily slave in ancient Rome yearning to be free.

Sondheim was born March 22, 1930, into a wealthy family, the only son of dress manufacturer Herbert Sondheim and Helen Fox Sondheim.

Amid turmoil, many reasons to be thankful

Expressing gratitude for Gaga and Bennett, Brady and a nonalcoholic beer made in Connecticut

By David McGrath

This Thanksgiving, what can we possibly have to be grateful for in a year marked by forest fires of unprecedented size and destructiveness in the West; a pandemic that has killed over 770,000 Americans; and an attack on the Capitol in Washington by a violent mob intent on overturning our democratic election?

Yet, according to Rutger Bregman's "Humankind," the more tumultuous the year, the more we have to be thankful for. As research detailed in his book shows, human beings, rather than turning into cynical, hopeless savages following wars and other catastrophes, have historically always endured, adapted, recovered and moved ahead with renewed hope. "Most people, deep down, are pretty decent," Bregman writes.

What follows, therefore, is a Thanksgiving list that affirms the Bregman dictum.

First, thanks and praise are owed to Lady Gaga, not just for her musical talents and eye-catching fashion, but also for her embrace of ailing American icon Tony Bennett in musical collaboration on what will be his last album, "Love for Sale." Of course, it is a profit-making venture. Nonetheless, with grace and reverence, she has inspired Bennett's amazing, if short-lived, escapes from the tyranny of Alzheimer's through the memory-sparking miracle of music, while she has helped raise awareness, as well as research funds, for this dreadful disease.

Speaking of miracles, we can also be grateful to Tampa Bay Buccaneers quarterback Tom Brady, the only man in NFL history to throw for 600 touchdowns and, at age 43, win a seventh Super Bowl. He is playing great again in his 22nd season, in a sport in which most quarterbacks' careers last but four. Thank you, Tommy Boy, for inspiring and enabling me and other seniors to think, if not feel, 20 years younger.

A big thank-you is owed to Frances Haugen, data engineer and former Facebook executive, for blowing the whistle on Facebook's express mission of prioritizing profits over safety of its users, especially of children, and for knowingly serving as the vehicle for the lies, propaganda and hate that have been ripping our country apart. Thanks especially for calling out the hypocritical affectation of innocence we've become accustomed to seeing on the face of Mark Zuckerberg at congressional hearings.

Thirsty thanks to Connecticut's Bill Shufelt and John Walker for founding the Athletic Brewing Co., among the first American breweries with a recipe for palatable nonalcoholic beer. Last year, after swearing off what was medicine-y water with bubbles in my New Year's resolutions, these two entrepreneurial saints answered my prayers by concocting craft beers with names such as Free Wave and Upside Dawn, which are absent the alcohol, yet still possess the sudsy and resinous beer flavor I love.

Besides making lots of money, 2% of which is donated to the preservation of green spaces and nature trails, the two master brewers have done the world a solid by enabling those who must avoid alcohol entirely, or others who want an IPA at lunch and a clear head the rest of the day, to still enjoy one of the world's oldest adult beverages.

At least 60% of us should say thanks to Robert Glaser, ex-Microsoft executive and founder of RealNetworks, the pioneer of livestreaming, whose experimental internet audio broadcast of a baseball game between the Seattle Mariners and the New York Yankees in 1995, paved the way for YouTube, Netflix and Apple TV, among other streaming services (which 60% of Americans are said to use). Movie lovers in the 1950s who were thrilled for a double feature on a Saturday night could have never imagined that people streaming at home in their La-Z-Boys in 2021 would have 14,000 films to choose from, and that's just on Amazon Prime.

The country's utmost gratitude goes out to U.S. Rep. Liz Cheney, R-Wyo., who at grave risk to her political career has spoken out against the Big Lie that the 2020 election was stolen, in a display of courage and character in the face of Donald Trump's cowardly sycophants in the Senate. Cheney's bravery is reminiscent of the heroism of legendary Sen. Margaret Chase Smith, R-Maine, who called out the scurrilous lies and "Red Scare" conspiracy theories of one of her own party leaders, Sen. Joe McCarthy, R-Wis., with this telling proclamation: "I don't want to see the Republican Party ride to political victory on the Four Horsemen of Calumny — fear, ignorance, bigotry and smear."

I'm thankful that over the course of a long life, my favorite hour has been just after dusk in summertime, heading home across a Wisconsin lake in a fishing boat, when the first of the fruit bats are peeling out of the woods, gliding low above the water, vacuuming mosquitoes. On a collision course with my bow, they veer away at the last second like Navy jet fighters, as water blends with stars and sky and rapture fills my heart.

I wish to say thanks to the scientists who invented vaccines that enabled me to survive COVID-19 this past year, and to live to see more of those perfect endings to such glorious days.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Why use extra adjective to describe Looney?

Why, in this article, do authors Daniela Altimari and Christopher Keating refer to Ned Lamont as a Democrat, Kevin Kelly as a Republican leader, but Martin Looney as a "liberal Democrat" (Page 1, Nov. 17, "Lamont to no longer seek climate change bill")? It is interesting to me a single adjective can be used to paint a different picture of a person other than just letting their words speak for themselves.

Patrick R. Kottas, Simsbury

Vote Lamont out of office

Gov. Ned Lamont announcing that he is running for another term for governor is indicative of his need to continue his control over the citizens of Connecticut [Page 1, Nov. 9, "Lamont filing paperwork for reelection"]. His reign of tyranny must end. Has history taught us nothing? Vote this egotistical, abuser of power, out office.

Roseann Buchiere, New Britain

Nice touch in article about kid governor

Now we're finally making progress. Kudos to Makhi Ettienne-Modeste for being elected to his one-year position as kid governor. And kudos to The Courant for not saying that Makhi, while being the first boy in this role, is African American (Connecticut, Page 1, Nov. 18, "Windsor student elected CT's next Kid Governor"]. Finally, a person of color was being recognized as just that, a person. It's a good day indeed!

Halting vaccine clinic just Step 1 for Killingly

On Nov. 17, the Killingly Board of Education shamefully voted down a needed vaccine clinic that was to be held at the high school on Nov. 19 [Page 1, Nov. 19, "Killingly board rejects vaccination clinic on school grounds"]. Opponents cited many reasons why it should not be held, many directly out of the QAnon handbook. It seems that national politics and ideology has breached our local governments and clouded the rational and critical thinking of many. Killingly has one of the highest transmission rates of COVID-19 per capita in the state. The arguments against the clinic were full of misinformation, but one argument stood out when a speaker said that "medical procedures do not belong in our schools." An interesting argument considering we consistently have blood drives at the high school. I propose we disallow all future blood drives in our schools. If holding a vaccine clinic at the high school will, as one public speaker put it, "apply pressure to students to get the vaccine," then surely having these blood drives is applying pressure to students to donate blood.

I trust the Killingly Board of Education will take this matter seriously and add it to a future agenda. We need to do everything we can to continue to make Killingly the laughingstock of the state.

Proper thanks to our Afghan allies requires more than words

By E.J. Dionne Jr.
The Washington Post

"It is gratefulness which makes the soul great," wrote Abraham Heschel, the inspiring Jewish thinker and prophet. Especially during Thanksgiving season, when words of gratitude flow effortlessly, it is worth drilling down to ask: What does it take to make gratitude great?

Gratitude is both more authentic and more credible when it is underwritten by tangible demonstrations of thanks. When we tell veterans "Thank you for your service," the sentiment means more when it's backed by a GI Bill and other forms of support.

It's no accident that veterans of the long war in Afghanistan are now at the forefront in welcoming Afghan refugees, who fled their homeland after rendering what was often hazardous service to the U.S. war effort. Americans who risked their lives know better than anyone what we owe others who risked so much for them.

At a moment when all politics is rancorous, we can give thanks for a unified effort from the top of our government down to the churches, synagogues, mosques and veterans groups in our communities welcoming Afghans fleeing the Taliban.

"I think gratitude is the perfect way to describe this, because the outpouring of support from people across the country has been nothing short of remarkable," Jack Markell, the White House coordinator for Operation Allies Welcome, told me this week. He spoke of his recent visit to Oklahoma City and Tulsa, where Catholic Charities affiliates are leading the resettlement efforts.

"You know, it's a pretty red state," said Markell, himself a former governor of Delaware. "I met with two Republican mayors who were so supportive. The number of volunteers turning out to support the efforts of Catholic Charities is remarkable, and we are seeing this across the country."

According to Markell's office, roughly 73,000 Afghans have come into the United States under the Operation Allies Welcome program. The White House estimates that a little under half of these have been relocated to U.S. communities. The rest remain at one of seven military installations.

Although some in Donald Trump's orbit have resisted resettlement of Afghan refugees, polls show overwhelming bipartisan support for being true to allies who now need our help.

An Associated Press/NORC poll last month found that 72% of Americans, including 76% of Democrats and 74% of Republicans, favored accepting Afghans who worked for the U.S. or Afghan governments. Support was less robust (and more split along party lines) for helping those who are fleeing out of fear of Taliban rule, but even for this broader group, a plurality (42% to 26%) supported accepting them.

Afghan refugees arrivie at Dulles International Airport outside of Washington on Aug. 24. The work of the aptly named group Welcome.Us brings home both the nonpartisan nature of the cause and the grass-roots energy on its behalf.

Founded by John Bridgeland, who directed President George W. Bush's Domestic Policy Council, and Cecilia Muñoz, who held the same job for President Barack Obama, the group seeks to reinvigorate our nation's best traditions of civic hospitality toward those fleeing oppression and seeking a better life.

Nazanin Ash, the group's chief executive and a veteran of refugee work whose family came to the United States from Iran, says Welcome.Us also hopes to reform the U.S. asylum system as a whole by stressing the work of nongovernmental organizations and building civil society partnerships on behalf of Afghan newcomers.

As an example, she cites Welcome.Us's alliance with Miles4 Migrants, an organization that encourages people to contribute frequent-flier miles to provide free flights for the displaced.

Alan Khazei, co-founder of the service group City Year and a senior adviser to Welcome.Us, reports that as of Monday, 783.8 million miles of travel had been donated on behalf of Afghans. About half came from frequent-flier miles, with the rest from other donors, including the major airlines themselves, Boeing and Trip Advisor. Those who want to help, Bridgeland adds, can also sign up through Airbnb to host an Afghan family.

The breadth of the personal, private-sector and civil-society response to the refugee surge is instructive. It demonstrates that while contention over U.S. policy on Afghanistan, past and present, is natural and inevitable, a robust debate can coexist with expressions of our shared humanity. In the face of often vicious political conflict, we Americans have not lost our capacity to respond person to person to those in need.

"This is as much about us as welcomers as it is about the needs of our Afghan neighbors," Muñoz said. "We have never regretted the times that we have reached out to welcome those who came to the U.S. seeking safety, and our nation has been so deeply enriched by their presence. This is one of those moments."

The quality of our gratitude will be judged by how we respond to it.

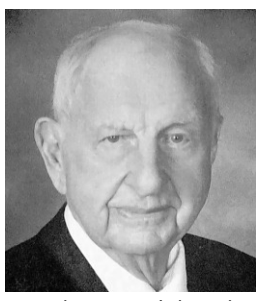
OBITUARIES

Andreo, Loren J.



Loren J. "Andy" Andreo, 93, of Manchester, beloved husband of 62 years to his devoted wife Margaret M. "Peggy" Andreo, passed away Tuesday, November 23, 2021, at his home surrounded by his loving family. Born in Manchester, he was the son of the late Domenick and Mary (Fracchia) Andreo and was a lifelong resident. Andy was a graduate of Manchester High School, had served in the US Navy and following his service graduated from Bryant College. A lifelong love of football, he played with the Manchester Merchants for 3 years.
Shortly after graduating from Bryant, he opened his first entrepreneurial endeavor Maple Market in 1951, which later evolved into Andy's Market setting him on the path of owning and operating several independent grocery stores over the span of more than five decades. This provided the foundation for his entrepreneurial spirit, having invested in many other entities, including bowling lanes, liquor stores, professional sports teams and was one of the original investors in the Superman movie franchise. He also built a real estate portfolio, including residential and commercial, starting in the mid-sixties through recent years, that has grown into a thriving family business, Andreo Family Enterprises.
A founding member and communicant of the Church of the Assumption, he was a great supporter and benefactor of both Assumption School and East Catholic High School, having received St. Joseph Medal of Appreciation from Archbishop Henry Mansell. Andy has also held various positions as a member of the Connecticut Vocational Board of Education; director of Glastonbury Bank and Trust Company; treasurer for the Dewey Investment Company; director East Hartford Chamber of Commerce; member East Hartford Rotary; director Connecticut Food Stores Association, and Man of the Year 1984; and board member of the Holy Apostles Seminary in Cromwell, CT. He was the recipient of the Bryant University Distinguished Alumnus Award in 2020. He was also a member of UNICO, and director Hartford County Sheriff's Office Foundation. He truly enjoyed spending his summers in Westerly, RI. Andy is survived by his children and their spouses, Loren Andreo Jr. and his wife Janet of West Simsbury, Michael Andreo and his wife Victoria of Tolland, Mary Randazzo and her husband Paul of Glastonbury, Karen Marandino and her husband Dominic Jr. of South Windsor, John Andreo and his wife Karen of South Windsor, Ann Brazel and her husband David of Glastonbury; his 22 grandchildren Loren III and wife Katja, Melissa and husband Joseph, Meghan and husband Chris, Michelle and husband Bill, Dana and fiancé Michael O'Sullivan, Paul and wife Rebecca, Matthew and wife Katlyn, Michael and wife Tori, Margaret, Christina and husband Brendan, Andrea and husband AJ, Dominic III and wife Alyssa, Lauren, John Jr., Jennifer, Nicholas, Christie and husband Steve, Jacalyn, Katherine and husband Dominic, Peter, Patrick and Kara and her fiancé Kyle Almeida; and 19 great-grandchildren; special friends Thomas Moriarty and his family, Norman Yester, Kenny Rider and Thomas Brazel; and many loving nieces and nephews. In addition to his loving wife, he was predeceased by his sister Gentila "Sandy" Pawloski.
A Mass of Christian Burial will be celebrated on Monday, November 29th at 11:00 a.m. at the Church of the Assumption, 27 Adams Street South, Manchester, followed by burial in St. James Cemetery. Please meet directly at the church. Family and friends may call at the John F. Tierney Funeral Home, 219 West Center St., Manchester on Sunday, November 28th from 2-7 p.m. Memorial contributions may be made to either East Catholic High School, 115 New State Road, Manchester, CT 06042 or the St. Francis Foundation, 95 Woodland Street, Hartford, CT 06105 or Bryant University, 1150 Douglas Pike, Smithfield, RI 02917. OBITUARIES

Polaske, Theresa K.

Theresa K. Polaske, 83, of Berlin Connecticut, passed away on Monday, November 22, after a long and courageous battle with cancer, with her family by her side. She was born in New Britain, CT and later moved to Kensington to raise her family. She met the love of her life and married her husband Ronald Thomas Polaske in 1958 and would have celebrated their 63rd anniversary on November 27th of this year. She graduated from New Britain High School and went on to be a Legal Secretary for years before moving on to become the Marketing Coordinator for the Maguire Group in New Britain, CT. She later led the marketing group for vanZelm, Heywood, and Shadford in West Hartford as the Marketing Manager. Teri was the President of the Society of Marketing Professionals (SMPS) as well as the President of the Women's Auxiliary of New Britain General Hospital.
She had a deep faith and was an active member of St. Paul's parish in Kensington, a member of the Ladies Guild, and taught religion at St Paul's Church to both her children and grandchildren.
Teri loved the beach and her summer home in Westerly, Rhode Island, where she and her husband Ron welcomed their children and grandchildren, building a lifetime of memories. She was a mother who was always there, loving and supporting her family, and that love only seemed to multiply when she had grandchildren. She was involved in all of her grandchildren's lives and had a special and unique relationship with each one. Teri loved flowers and spent endless hours in her garden. She was a master seamstress who made her own clothes, beautiful draperies, pillows and made countless Halloween costumes. She cherished the holidays where she was able to spend time surrounded by and feeding her loving family.
Her favorite cocktail was a bourbon Old Fashion, her favorite color was blue, and she loved the Polish holiday traditions. Teri leaves behind her beloved children, Ronald Polaske and his wife Kathleen Sheerin Polaske of Dennis, MA, Lisa P. McCurdy and her husband Craig of Newport, RI. She also leaves her beloved grandchildren, Thomas Polaske and his wife Melissa of Boston, MA, Spencer Polaske and his wife Kelsey of Stamford CT, Eric McCurdy of Colchester, CT, Theresa Cecilia (Tess) McCurdy and her fiancé David Blauzvern of Boston, MA, and Quinn Mccurdy and Sebastian Camacho of New York, NY. She also leaves her sister and best friend, Dorothy Salvio and her husband Louis of New Britain, CT, her brother-in-law Eugene Polaske and his late wife Mona and sister-in-law Dorothy Zaleski. She was predeceased by her parents, Stanley and Cecilia Kowalewski of New Britain, CT.
She was our Rockstar and will be missed beyond measure. Some of Teri's last words were, "I'm happy, be happy, keep laughing." Wonderful words to live by.
A Mass of Christian Burial will take place on Monday, November 29, 2021, at 11:30 a.m. at St. Paul Church, 461 Alling St., Berlin. Family and friends may call on Sunday, November 28, 2021, from 4:00 p.m. – 7:00 p.m. at the Duksa Family Funeral Homes at Burritt Hill, 332 Burritt St., New Britain. Teri will be lovingly laid to rest in Sacred Heart Cemetery, New Britain, CT. To share a memory with Teri's family, please visit us at www.duksa.net

Van Der Jagt, Lawrence

Lawrence Van Der Jagt, 89, of Simsbury, CT, passed away at his home with family by his side on November 22, 2021. Born and raised in Hawthorne, New Jersey, Larry was the beloved husband of Rose (Marenzano) Van Der Jagt for 68 years. He was the son of the late Lourens and Jennie (Van Dyk) Van Der Jagt.
From an early age, Larry displayed a great deal of curiosity for the world around him and how things worked. He was a bright and determined student, the first in the family to attend college. Following his graduation from Fairleigh Dickinson University, he began designing jet engines at the Curtiss-Wright Corporation. Later he moved on to North American Rockwell where he continued his work in aerospace engineering. Next he moved to the Reaction Motors Division of Thiokol where he helped design and test the attitude control engines for the Apollo space crafts. He and his family moved to Connecticut in 1968. He was employed by Hamilton Standard and worked in a variety of roles ultimately leading to Director of Operations. As a Director, Larry successfully oversaw the construction of a new overhaul and repair facility in the Netherlands. Committed to his continued education, Larry earned an Executive MBA from the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute.
Though he greatly enjoyed his work in the aerospace industry, Larry's true love was his family. He was a proud husband and father and delighted in his role as grandfather and great-grandfather. A kindhearted and generous soul, Larry loved to share a laugh and make memories with his cherished and growing family and friends.
Larry also found great peace enjoying nature and the outdoors. He loved fishing in the surf, deep sea fishing and vacations on the Jersey Shore. He was a keen pool player, an avid Yankees and Giants fan and would happily share a cold Budweiser with anyone. He developed a great interest in horticulture and became a graduate of the Master Gardener Program at UConn. Later he served as its Association President. A respected and endearing man with sound advice and a good-natured sense of humor, Larry could make friends anywhere he went. He will always be loved and remembered by those who knew him, and he will be dearly missed forever.
Larry is survived by his four children, Lourens Van Der Jagt and his wife, Beverly, Carolyn Van Der Jagt, Ronald Van Der Jagt and his wife, Teri, Brenda Van Der Jagt-Bellott and her husband, John Paul; his niece, Karen, among other nieces and nephews, and his adored grandchildren Derrick, Michael, Lar, Diana, Rebecca, Ron, Dana, Casey, Paul, Melissa, and many beautiful great-grandchildren. Larry was predeceased by his brother, Peter Van Der Jagt, and his sisters, Margaret Lucas and Janet Latona.
Larry's family will celebrate a private memorial service at Simsbury Cemetery. In lieu of flowers, donations in his honor may be made to the Simsbury Volunteer Ambulance Association, P.O. Box 301, Simsbury, CT 06070, the Farmington Valley VNA, 8 Old Mill Lane, Simsbury, CT 06070, or St. Jude Children's Hospital, 501 St. Jude Place, Memphis, TN 38105. The Hayes-Huling & Carmon Funeral Home of Granby is in care of the arrangements. To share a memory or condolence message with Larry's family, please visit www.carmonfuneralhome.com.

Greene, Elaine D. (Gianopoulos)

Leominster, MA - Elaine D. (Gianopoulos) Greene died at home on November 23, 2021, of a respiratory infection. She was born August 3, 1937 in Hartford, CT and raised in South Willington, CT. She was the youngest child of George A. and Helene (Meyen) Gianopoulos. Her husband Jeremiah E. Greene, Jr. died in 2014.

In addition to her parents and husband, she was predeceased by her daughter, Anne; her brother, John G. Gianopoulos; and a great nephew, Brandon G. Gianopoulos. She is survived by three children, Anthony J. Greene (Grace) of New York City, Meredith E. Ross (Peter) of New York City, and Edward J. Greene of Leominster, and two grandsons, Leo and Isaac Ross. She is also survived by her sister, Jean L. Gianopoulos of Hartford, CT; her brother, George A. Gianopoulos, of Marlborough, CT; and her husband's only remaining sibling, Mary B. Greene, of Dorchester, MA. She also leaves her nephews, John E. Gianopoulos, Perry M. Gianopoulos, and niece, Kim (Gianopoulos) Hanka, all of Manchester, CT; and nephew George A. Gianopoulos III, of Fort Collins, CO; as well as many extended members of the Greene family, grandnephews and nieces, and wonderful and special friends.

Elaine received her undergraduate degree in biology from the University of Hartford and her master's degree from Fitchburg State University.

She was raised in agrarian New England and loved the rural surroundings. For many years she taught biology, ecology, math, and medical courses at several colleges. In her leisure, she was an avid knitter, reader, gardener, and environmentalist.

In life she was Mom and Granny. Along with being a member of several professional organizations, Elaine was a member of Who's Who in American Education, and a life member of Appalachian Mountain Club.

The family will hold a memorial service at a later date. Elaine's parting wish is that each person show kindness to others.

Lamonica, Giuseppa (Magnano)

Giuseppa "Josephine" (Magnano) Lamonica, 96, of Manchester, passed away peacefully at her son's home on Sunday, November 21, 2021. This was her home for the last few years of her life. She was born on October 2, 1925, in Belvedere, Sicily; the place she called home for 30 years. Giuseppa was the daughter of the late Salvatore and Marietta (Celia) Magnano. She married the love of her life, Girolamo "Jerry" Lamonica, to whom she was married to for 58 years. They immigrated to the United States in 1955 with their three children, and lived in Hartford for the first few years. She and her family then moved to East Hartford, where she spent most of her life. She worked for Royal Typewriter, Silver Lane Pickle Company and Coca Cola Factory, but her greatest work was arguably in the kitchen. She was renowned to many for her exceptional culinary skills, cooking her famous sauce, banada, pizza and cutlets, just to name a few. Her beloved family and many friends were always welcome in her home and never left hungry.
Giuseppa leaves behind her loving children, Filomena Lamonica and husband Walter Kregelstein of Pompano Beach, Florida and Sergio Lamonica and wife Emelea of Manchester. She also leaves behind five adoring grandchildren: Michael Quinn, Donna Quinn, Cheryl Lawhun, Rhiannon Scioscio, and Cherie Fakas. She will be missed dearly by her many great grandchildren, nephews, nieces and cousins as well, who were blessed to have had her in their lives. She truly loved watching all of her grandchildren grow and play, and they loved her right back. She will be deeply missed by all of her family and friends.
Giuseppa is predeceased by her husband, Jerry Lamonica; her daughter, Anna Maria Borysciewicz; her grandson, Richard Buttero and her brothers and sister in Sicily. Giuseppa was truly proud of her Sicilian heritage and loved visiting Franklin Avenue, Hartford regularly to enjoy her favorite treats from her home country. At home, when she wasn't cooking, she loved listening and singing along to her favorite songs, caring for her beautiful roses, and watching professional wrestling; she knew all the wrestlers by name. She loved to wrap herself up in a blanket and enjoy her favorite American soap operas. The "Bold and the Beautiful" was one of them, and rightly so. Josephine was both bold and beautiful. Aside from her beloved home, she also felt at home with her toes in the sand on the Rhode Island shore. She spent many beautiful summer days with her family enjoying the "Bella Mare". We would be remiss without sharing our deepest gratitude for the loving care of her wonderful caretaker, Justina Antwi and the compassionate care of the Hartford Health Hospice team, who allowed her to be comfortable in her final days.
Calling hours and a celebration of Giuseppa's life will be held on Monday, November 29 from 5-7 p.m at the D'Esopo East Hartford Memorial Chapel, 30 Carter Street, East Hartford. A Mass of Christian Burial will be held on Tuesday, November 30 at 10 a.m. at St. Christopher's Church, 538 Brewer Street, East Hartford. Burial will follow in Hillside Cemetery, East Hartford. To share a memory of Giuseppa with her family, please visit www.desopoeh.com.

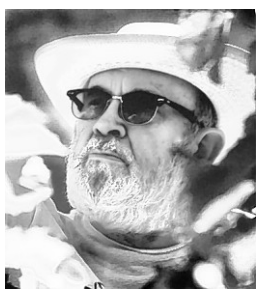
OBITUARIES

Bobbitt, James M.



James McCue Bobbitt passed away November 22, 2021 after being injured in an automobile accident in Windham, Connecticut. He was on the cusp of 92. He was born on January 18, 1930 in Charleston, West Virginia to James Sterling Bobbitt and Grace McCue Bobbitt and was their only treasured child.

He was a wonderful husband, father and grandfather who cared for and helped so many people that crossed his path in life. James was first, foremost, and always a chemist and a dedicated teacher. While he also made wine from his Twenty Mile vineyard in Atwoodville, raised bees, and for years maintained a large garden, chemistry and teaching were his passions. He was experimenting and writing scientific papers late into his 80's. He was a son of West Virginia and graduated from West Virginia University where he met his wife, Jane Ann Hickman, "the smartest student in the class." He went on to study at Ohio State and Wayne State Universities before becoming a distinguished Professor of Organic Chemistry at the University of Connecticut. He eventually became Professor Emeritus there, and loved the "big Chemistry Set they let me play with." He was the author of several books, thousands of scientific papers and reviews and was a kind and gentle mentor to many students. He was an avid reader of novels, traveler, adventurer and cook. He often said that he had been totally blessed in life. He is survived by his wife, Jane Ann and his three children, John, Annie, and Laura, as well as a loving extended family including his precious grandchildren Ian, Eric and Brittany. We will all greatly miss his kindness, deep love of gentle and humorous tales, and his dedication to science and teaching. He embodied the notion of a renaissance man. A brief service will be held in Storrs at a later date. For an online memorial guestbook please visit www.potterfuneralhome.com.

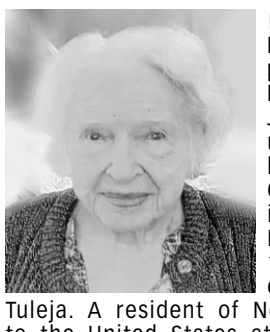
Cornish, Helen



Helen (Tuleja) Cornish, 98, of New Britain, passed away peacefully on Monday, November 22, 2021 at the Jerome Home. She is now reunited with her beloved husband of 69 years, David O. Cornish, who predeceased her in 2014.

Born in Poland on December 7, 1922, Helen was the only child of the late Frank and Cecelia Tuleja. A resident of New Britain since immigrating to the United States at the age of 7, she attended local schools and was a talented seamstress from young age, an art that she shared with her family and friends throughout her lifetime with intricately sewn and crocheted items, most especially her remarkable Christmas ornaments. A devoted wife and mother, she shared in her husband's patriotic pride throughout his military career, raised two successful children and was proud to witness two more generations grow and prosper. In her later years, she found pleasure in collecting Hummel figurines, and making trips to the barn where she had a special connection with the horses. Remembered for her strength, love and dedication to her family, she leaves many cherished memories and will be missed dearly.

Helen is survived by her sons and daughters-in-law, Robert and Victoria Cornish of Plainville and David and Alice Cornish of Southington; her grandchildren, Robert, Jamie, Jason, and Julie; and great-grandchildren, Danielle, Charlie, Donovan, Myles, Nya, Dylan and Everett.

In lieu of flowers, Helen may be remembered with contributions to an organization benefitting veterans.

A Mass of Christian Burial in celebration of Helen's life will be held on Monday at 10 a.m. at Sacred Heart Church, 158 Broad St, New Britain. Committal will follow at Sacred Heart Cemetery. Family and friends may gather one hour prior to the mass, from 8:30-9:30 a.m. at Plainville Funeral Home, 81 Broad St, Plainville. Controvillas, Eleanor M.

Eleanor (Mieczkowski) Controvillas, 100, of Burlington, passed away peacefully on Sunday, November 21, 2021. She was the beloved wife of the late William J. Controvillas, Sr. Born and raised in New Britain, she was the daughter of the late Joseph and Rose (Orlowski) Mieczkowski. Elie received her Bachelor's Degree from the University of Connecticut, her Master's Degree in Education from the University of Hartford, and began her teaching career in Wallingford. She and her husband settled in Newington in 1950 and moved to Burlington in 1973. She was a reading consultant at Martin Kellogg Middle School in Newington and at Newington High School, retiring in 1986. In their retirement, Elie and her husband Bill enjoyed playing golf into their 90s, and both were avid UConn Women's Basketball fans. They summered annually in Frye Island, ME, and spent winters in Vero Beach, FL. A loving mother, grandmother, and great grandmother, she leaves her two sons, William J. Controvillas, Jr., and his wife Betsy of Port St. Lucie, FL, Brion Controvillas and his wife Mary of Waldoboro, ME, her grandchildren, Melanie Gallup and her husband Drew, Laura Geraghty, Ryan Controvillas and his fiancée Sarah McLaughlin, and Aubree C. Heller as well as her great-grandchildren, Caden and Connor Gallup, Madison Geraghty, and Madilynn, Ireland, Jack and Natasha Heller. She also leaves her dear friend Sally Swanson of Avon. In addition to her husband, Elie was predeceased by her seven siblings. There are no calling hours. A Celebration of Life will be held at a future date. Memorial donations may be made to the Burlington Volunteer Fire Department (BVFD) Ambulance, P.O. Box 1285, Burlington, CT 06013. Duksa Family Funeral Homes at Newington Memorial, 20 Bonair Ave., Newington, is assisting her family. To share a memory, please visit www.duksa.net.

Kingston, Jayne Camille

Jayne Camille (Christian) Kingston, 78, of Tariffville, Connecticut, passed away peacefully at home on Monday November 22, 2021. Jayne was born in Georgia on January 7, 1943, the son of the late John and Carmen (Baldwin) Christian, and was raised in Abilene, Texas, where she attended local schools, and then Hardin-Simmons University. After meeting her eventual husband Lt. Col. (ret.) John "Jack" Kingston, Jr., while serving Jack (then a Texas A&M Corps member) pie as a waitress at the local "five and dime" restaurant — and Jack proposing soon after — she left Hardin-Simmons to follow him in his military and subsequent teaching career. Jack and Jayne ultimately landed in Connecticut, raising their family of three boys there. Jayne later received her bachelor's degree from Eastern Connecticut State University, and after raising her children was a teacher in the Hartford Public Schools for ten years prior to retirement. Jayne was a devoted wife, mother, and grandmother and an active 28-year member of Trinity Episcopal Church in Tariffville. She spent 26 of those years as a loyal member of the choir, and was a dedicated member of their vestry and healing committee, as well as an active volunteer with the Church in the McLean Retirement Community. In retirement, Jayne enjoyed spending time with her friends (the "Golden Girls"), and traveling with Jack prior to his passing. They enjoyed trips to Jerusalem, a second to St. George's College of Jerusalem where she completed the "Palestine of Jesus" course, Europe, Mexico, a Norwegian Tour, and many visits to see her mother and sister in Oklahoma. Up through her final moments, she was deeply invested in her many devotionals ("Jesus Calling" was a favorite — she was eager to distribute a copy to anyone who would take one), her love of old hymns ("Elvis Presley gospel" radio was running constantly on Pandora), and her prayer circles. Jayne was predeceased by her husband Jack, and is survived by her sons; John Kingston, III and his wife Jean of Winchester, Massachusetts, James Jason Kingston of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and Joel Christian Kingston and his wife Bridget of Granby, Connecticut; her grandchildren; Caitlin (and her husband), Annalise (and her husband Troy), Christopher, William, James and Abigail, and Helen Chen of Winchester, Massachusetts, the mother of James and Abigail. A memorial service for Jayne will take place on Sunday November 28, 2021, at 2:00 p.m. at Trinity Episcopal Church, 11 Church Street, in Tariffville. In lieu of flowers, contributions in Jayne's memory may be directed to Trinity Episcopal Church. For condolences or directions, please visit www.carmonfuneralhome.com.

Madey, Margaret R.

Margaret R. Madey, 95, of Windsor, beloved wife of the late Joseph F. Madey passed away peacefully on Monday, November 22, 2021 at her home, surrounded by her loving family. Daughter of the late William and Molly (Fitzpatrick) Ryan, Margaret ("Peg") was employed by CIGNA for many years and ended her career at Connecticut Mutual. Peg was involved in many social, civic and church activities over the years, including president of the Windsor Women's Club, a volunteer with the Summer Winds concert series and attending an annual Women's Day of Prayer service where she met many wonderful women of all faiths. She stayed informed and involved with the issues that impacted the local community and supported many causes that were important to her. Peg loved to be with friends and family and hosted many parties at her home. She loved to cook and entertain and made the most delicious apple pies. She adored her grandsons and loved spending time with them in CT and GA. We will miss the knowledge and wisdom that she shared. She is survived by daughter, Kathleen Moffett and her husband, Daniel of Alpharetta, GA and grandsons, Ryan, and Patrick Moffett of Atlanta, GA. She was predeceased by her son, William (Billy) Madey and brothers William and Gerald Ryan. She is also survived by her late son Billy's lifelong partner, Sheila Lennon and dear friends, Parker and Marie Kimball. A special and heartfelt "thank you" to her wonderful caregivers Sheila, Norma and Lola who took such great care of her during the last months of her life. Her family will receive friends on Tuesday, November 30, 2021 from 10-10:45 AM at Sacred Heart Church, 26 Wintonbury Ave., Bloomfield followed by a Mass of Christian Burial at 11:00 AM at Sacred Heart Church. Burial will be in Windsor Veterans Cemetery, Windsor. Carmon Funeral Home has care of arrangements. To leave on-line condolences please visit www.carmonfuneralhome.com

Joe Pera's Adult Swim series "Joe Pera Talks With You" recently kicked off its third season. ADULT SWIM

Quiet, artful comedy

Pera feels joke is in straightforward delivery on series

By Robert Lloyd
Los Angeles Times

These are trying times, but we may take some comfort in the fact that a third season of "Joe Pera Talks With You" recently premiered on Adult Swim. That such a singular and delicate thing has survived, even thrived, in the roiling seas of television is a seemingly small but not inconsiderable mercy. Briefly stated, it's a show about a soft-spoken, round-shouldered middle school choir teacher in Michigan's Upper Peninsula who offers "presentational" videos — they have titles like "Joe Pera Takes You to Breakfast," "Joe Pera Answers Your Questions About Cold Weather Sports" and "Joe Pera Gives You Piano Lessons" and involve talking to the camera. But everything veers off into something quite different, and often quite profound. Sincerely interested in ordinary human rituals and the wonders of nature — the show encourages an attitude of appreciation — it's a comedy I am just as liable to watch with tears streaming down my face as laughing. Most episodes are cartoon-length and somehow packed with events while never breaking into so much as a trot.

Pera, 33, the show's creator and star, has been coming your way for a while now, leaving tracks in the web since college, making the odd late-night talk show appearance. He is not exactly the person he plays on TV — he refers to him as "the character" — but there is surely a lot of Pera in there; it is not a mask so much as a window.

"We just give a quick glimpse in 11 minutes, and then drop notes of other stories going on, and make the world feel complete and real," Pera said.

This interview with Pera has been edited for clarity and length.

Q: In the new season, you're dealing with the sale of your grandmother's house. Are those difficult moments for you to play?

A: It wasn't as bad as having to deal with her death in the previous season; that was tough to write and perform and edit while keeping the proper amount of weight and balancing it with the comedy. But Conner O'Malley (who writes for the show and plays Joe's high-strung neighbor) was like, "You should continue to deal with it realistically, all that aftermath of death you don't want to deal with." Also the character was raised by his grandparents, and he has to kind of rebuild his life without them. So the sale of the house is moving away from ties to the past and figuring out who he is in another way.

Q: What are the lines between you and the character?

A: The big thing is the career change. I didn't want to do another show about a stand-up comedian. A lot of my friends from school became music teachers, and now I get to spend like three, four months each season in the Midwest shooting and pretend to have an alternative life, where I wasn't a comedian but a choir teacher. A lot of my stand-up was talking about a little bit of guilt that I'd left my family in Buffalo (New York) to be in New York (City). Like the breakfast club episode in season one. I was home, my dad was talking about some friends of his that go to breakfast regularly at a bagel shop, and he made (my brother and I) feel bad we weren't with them. So I was doing a joke onstage, "What is the best breakfast club? It's going with your full-grown sons." It kind of came from that, the guilt that I'm not there.

Q: Do you cast locally? Some of your performers seem to be nonprofessionals.

A: We cast a lot of our friends from the comedy scene right off the bat. Gene (Kelly, who plays Joe's best friend) was a cameraman working at "Seth Meyers" that Conner started writing bits for while he was working there. We find a lot of people while we're scouting. We had to find the right-looking beauty parlor for last season, and the owner, Yvonne, was just such a wonderful personality, we were like, "Please, you've got to give this a chance." And she was excellent; she spent her career doing hair and talking to people and making them feel good, why wouldn't she read wonderfully on camera? I was doing YouTube videos with my grandparents for years, but then my grandmother was in the Christmas special we did. You just don't know what's going to happen, which is scary on a TV schedule, but it's worth it. You always get that one moment or expression or delivery of a line you could never possibly plan.

Q: It's easy to get emotionally invested in the show. I'm so happy that you and Sarah are still together in the new season.

A: Yeah, it would be a shame to cut Jo Firestone (who plays Sarah and is also one of the writers) out of the show, she's so funny. We never made a show before this, only videos, and we're all kind of learning. I want it to feel like a community-made show and have the quality that somebody just picked up a camera and started filming around town and is doing the best they can. We make mistakes, but we don't mind incorporating them because we think it's funny.

Q: Your "quarantine" special, "Relaxing Old Footage With Joe Pera," with its images of nature ... is full of Joe-style jokes and observations, but it is truly relaxing.

A: I think we probably made that out of a desire to relax ourselves, but also we try to make good on the promises that are titles of the show. Like with "Joe Pera Talks You to Sleep," I'm delighted when anybody says that it works for real. I want people to truly feel relaxed, and I think people wanted it real bad at that moment. (With "Relaxing Old Footage"), we had so much b-roll of this and that from previous seasons, we always joked about making a three-hour tree documentary, and we finally stitched it together in kind of a coherent way. It made me feel better to make it, and I'm glad if it made anybody else feel better.

Q: Given Joe's oddball character, there's some temptation at first to take the show as ironic, but it strikes me as completely sincere.

A: If anything, the joke is how straightforward we are about stuff. I like the directness of it. I always use the example in the writers room, there's a joke Dan (Licata) wrote that unlocks a lot of the humor: "You know what I like most about barbecue? The smoky flavor." (Laughs.) It's just literally that. (Keeps laughing.) There's something so funny — it's just stating a fact.

After 'Mayor Pete,' check out these political documentaries

By Katie Walsh
Tribune News Service

Arriving on Amazon Prime is a new documentary about one of the rising political stars whose emergence in the 2020 U.S. presidential campaign surprised many.

Pete Buttigieg is the first openly gay presidential candidate, a veteran and a Harvard graduate who has traded one nickname for another: "Mayor Pete" is now "Secretary Pete," the first openly gay Cabinet secretary and the youngest secretary of transportation ever.

Acclaimed documentarian Jesse Moss trained his lens on Buttigieg during his meteoric rise to political fame in the 2020 election, and the result is the illuminating documentary "Mayor Pete."

"Mayor Pete" takes a granular look at the process that it takes for the unknown mayor of a Midwestern city to launch himself onto the national stage and take a presidential election featuring a who's who of longtime Washington stalwarts by storm. At the center of the chaos, Buttigieg remains calm, unflappable and informed, almost so stoic that his communications director Lis Smith spends almost the entire film encouraging him to open up emotionally.

Robert MacDougall in the documentary "Boys State," which is streaming on Apple TV+. A24

It's a fascinating look at one of America's political rising stars. "Mayor Pete" follows on the heels of another political film directed by Moss, directed with longtime collaborator Amanda McBain, the award-winning "Boys State," which premiered on Apple TV+ in 2020. "Boys State" takes look at a Texas political camp for teenage boys, a riveting reflection of our contemporary political culture.

There have been several documentaries about our new political stars, including Rep. Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez, whose campaign was depicted in the 2019 Netflix documentary "Knock Down the House," directed by Rachel Lears.

Stacey Abrams, the former minority leader of the Georgia House of Representatives and gubernatorial candidate, and her fight against voter suppression are profiled in the 2020 documentary "All In: The Fight for Democracy" directed by Liz Garbus and Lisa Cortes (Garbus also serves as a producer on "Mayor Pete."). Stream that film on Amazon Prime.

Filmmaker Robert Drew pioneered the campaign documentary back in 1960 with the film "Primary," following the primary elections between John F. Kennedy and Hubert Humphrey.

Using lightweight camera equipment to put the viewer in the middle of the drama, he revolutionized the look and feel of documentary cinema, and paved the way for films like "Mayor Pete." Stream this landmark film on HBO Max.

For a campaign documentary about a campaign that goes horribly, absurdly awry, don't miss the fascinating 2016 documentary "Weiner," directed by Elyse Steinberg and Josh Kriegman, about the rise and scandal-plagued fall of Anthony Weiner during his 2013 campaign for New York City mayor. For every rising star, indeed there is one that must fall. Rent "Weiner" for $2.99 on all major digital streaming platforms.

A brilliant but haunted brain researcher (Lee Sun-kyun) hacks into the memories of his loved ones in the South Korean miniseries "Dr. Brain," now streaming on Apple TV+. APPLE TV+

'DR. BRAIN' ★★★

Brain-hacking is the key to this South Korean mystery

By Michael Phillips
Chicago Tribune

It's a whodunit. It's a medical procedural. It's science fiction. It's film noir! It's a bloodstained rendition of the old song "Thanks for the Memory"!

It's all that, and it's called "Dr. Brain," now on Apple TV+. With "Squid Game" now officially Netflix's most-watched series, Apple TV+ has hustled its own South Korean property into international circulation.

"Dr. Brain" comes from a webtoon, aka digital comic, and the six-part limited series will make new episodes available each Thursday. The story literalizes the idea of how we carry memories of others around with us, in a procedure involving hacking into people's brains to access memories for the purposes of mystery-solving. The "brain sync" sequences, in which our quietly obsessive brain scientist hero hacks into the noggin of his comatose wife or (my favorite) a dead cat, drip with visual possibilities. Creator and director Kim Jee-woon imagines each unauthorized neurological experiment a little differently, just as Martin Scorsese handled each boxing match in "Raging Bull" differently.

The final two episodes of "Dr. Brain" may frustrate the give-it-to-me-straight-no-more-dream-sequences-please crowd. But as a genre mashup, and craftsmanship, the series is super-sleek, very violent and pretty sharp.

It's also blithely unafraid of imperiling its child characters early and often, handing the key character a lifetime's worth of internalized anguish in the first 20 minutes. After witnessing the brutal death of his mother, the specially gifted future brain researcher Sewon Koh (Lee Sun-kyun) grows up to suffer even greater losses. His five-year-old son, who lies somewhere on the autism spectrum like his father, dies in a mysterious explosion. Sewon's wife (Lee Yoo-Young) becomes another casualty of sorts. The trailer keeps few secrets regarding the foul play underneath it all, and the larger conspiracy bubbling in "Dr. Brain."

A snarling private detective (Park Hee-soon) starts nosing into Sewon's affairs, bringing up what Sewon has known all along: that his wife had an affair with another man. But is Sewon's son truly dead? The series progresses from brain sync to brain sync, with Sewon mining the memories of his wife, and others, for clues to what really happened to his family. As Sewon conducts more and more unauthorized procedures, his own mind becomes an unreliable blur of other people's memories. Sewon has his own cerebral ways of crime solving, in every sense of that word; the police have theirs.

"Just when you think you know a thing or two, you die," says one prominent character (no spoilers!) who dreams of sustaining his legacy well into the future. "Dr. Brain" may think it's saying something larger and more philosophically provocative than that (it isn't), but it works without an extra dimension of meaning. Whole sections of "Dr. Brain" are silly as hell, but to paraphrase the old song: You might've been a headache. But you never were a bore.

'Girl, Interrupted' characters come to life in Mann's songs

By Mark Kennedy
Associated Press

Musician Aimee Mann recently released the album "Queens of the Summer Hotel." FRAZER HARRISON/GETTY 2012

The songs on Aimee Mann's new album didn't struggle to get out of her head. They seemed to tumble out at a speed that shocked even their owner.

"There was just a sense of urgency, and I'm not really sure why it was. There was like a literal fever. There were songs that I wrote in a day, which is not at all my thing," the singer-songwriter says. "Once I start really concentrating on it, it just kind of became my whole life for a while."

It became "Queens of the Summer Hotel," 15 songs created for a still-to-happen stage adaptation of the novel "Girl, Interrupted," Susannah Kaysen's memoir about her psychiatric hospitalization in the late 1960s. The album was recently released via Mann's SuperEgo Records.

"It's very fun to take a piece of prose and think about how you can turn it into a song and think about what the mood of that needs to be and try to picture it as it would appear on the stage," Mann says.

While the show's path to the stage is still up in the air, the songs it inspired have Mann's signature sardonic humor, wry lyrics, moody melodies and powerful emotional resonance. How they get used on stage doesn't seem to bother the songwriter.

"I don't know what it will look like. It may just be more like a play with some music. That's kind of up to them, but because I'd had so many songs, I was like, 'Well, now I feel like I have to record them.' "

"Girl, Interrupted" is about the nearly two years Kaysen spent confined in McLean Hospital, an upscale psychiatric institution in Massachusetts. The bestselling book, published in 1993, contains vivid portraits of fellow patients and helped push the discussion about how America treats mental illness. A film starring Winona Ryder and Angelina Jolie followed.

Mann, who first gained fame fronting 'til tuesday and earned an Oscar nod for her work on the "Magnolia" soundtrack, started with the book, marking passages she thought would make interesting songs or scenes that could conceivably translate into musical moments.

"My idea was to have each character have a song — sort of like 'A Chorus Line' — where each character talks about their own relationship to the overarching theme," Mann says.

So "In Mexico" is a portrait of a character in the book who lived in Mexico and shot speed. "Burn It Out" is about a character who set herself on fire. A mention in the book that the poets Sylvia Plath and Robert Lowell had also been treated at the same psychiatric hospital prompted the song "Robert Lowell and Sylvia Plath."

Mann titled the album "Queens of the Summer Hotel" so it could stand alone from whatever final "Girl, Interrupted" cast album emerged. She got the name from a glib comment from the poet Anne Sexton, who also was treated at McLean Hospital. Sexton called it "a summer hotel."

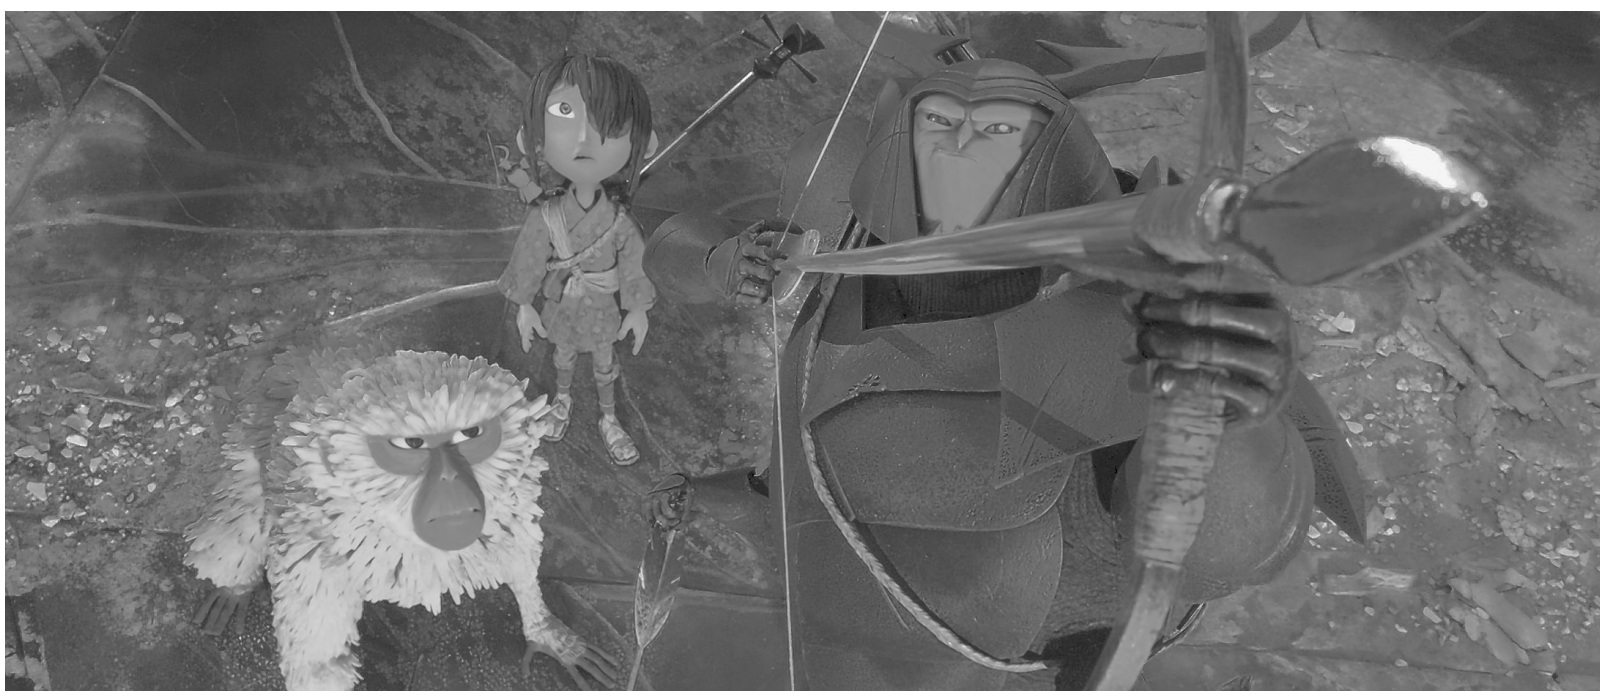
Mann called the process an "interesting puzzle" and a challenge. "I found that really exciting. I mean, obviously, the subject matter is something I'm familiar with and I have been interested in for a long time."

Indeed, the album comes four years after her last, "Mental Illness," which won the Grammy for best folk album. She has often talked of her struggles with depression and anxiety, in part to explode any stigma.

"I think the American attitude is that if you have a problem, you should be able to solve it by yourself, that to admit that you have a problem is to be weak. It's all this ridiculous rugged individualism," she says. "But I do think that's relaxing a little bit, and people are starting to take these things more seriously."

Best stop-motion films handcrafted, beautiful

By Chris Hewitt
Minneapolis Star Tribune



Monkey, from left, Kubo and Beetle in "Kubo and the Two Strings." LAIKA STUDIOS/FOCUS FEATURES

In just about any film class, the first thing the teacher will say is that everything in a movie is there for a reason.

If a scene is shot from eye-level or a bird's-eye view, that's because the director and cinematographer thought that was best (whether they're right is another story). If a cat wanders through the background of a scene, it was either planned that way or the director decided it was interesting enough to keep. Auteurs such as Alfred Hitchcock planned everything in advance, but even go-with-the-flow directors get the final say about which parts of the flow we'll see on screen.

I mention that only because the most created-for-our-eyes-only kind of movie is stop-motion animation, which uses a series of static images (usually involving some kind of puppet) to create the illusion of movement. Literally every single thing we see on screen is there for a reason. Stop-motion movies, which date to the early days of cinema, don't depict reality; they depict something better. By creating a world that resembles ours but clearly isn't, they give us an eye-opening new way to look at the things around us.

Aardman Animation's clay (actually, plasticene) figures may be the best example, since you can often see fingerprints on the characters — evidence of the hands that painstakingly posed the characters between shots to make them "move."

Take the dazzling opening of "Chicken Run." Even before we've met the characters, it blows us away with a shot of a prison camp at night, especially if you take a moment to think about each element. Just the lighting alone includes tiny bulbs suspended over the camp to catch potential escapees, a miniature lantern held by a guard and moonlight that gently blankets the camp. The whole thing is probably a foot tall and 4 feet wide, but there must be about 50 different sources of light within it, each lovely in its own right.

A scene from "Chicken Run." CLAY ANIMATION

The cool thing about the best stop-motion animation (and animation, generally) is that, like a magician who amazes us with a trick and then reveals how they do it, it tells a story while also letting us in on the technique. You can enjoy all of these outstanding movies for their stunning visuals and stories, without worrying about any of that. But if you take a minute to think about how they were put together, these greats get even better.

'Chicken Run': There are so many reasons to love 2000's hilarious debut feature from England's Aardman Animation. The voice cast is distinctive (Julia Sawalha, Imelda Staunton, Miranda Richardson, Timothy Spall). It's not just funny; it's also exciting and sweet. And it's an unofficial remake of "The Great Escape" that substitutes a factory farm for a Nazi prison camp and plucky chickens for Steve McQueen and James Garner.

'Kubo and the Two Strings': Aardman's biggest competition in the stop-animation world is Laika, the American company that produced this tender tale of a Japanese boy on a mythic quest. The 2016 film is funny and touching, but leans more in the direction of "Raiders of the Lost Ark" as Kubo fulfills his destiny. The gorgeous climax features a ceremony in which thousands of paper lanterns are released.

'Frankenweenie': "When you lose someone you love, they never really leave you. They just move into a special place in your heart," Victor's mom (voiced by Catherine O'Hara) tells him when his dog dies. But Victor can't manage his grief in Tim Burton's macabre 2012 comedy, so he Dr. Frankensteins a spare-parts version of his pooch. Predictably, it doesn't go well. Unpredictably, "Frankenweenie" is the biggest tear-jerker on this tear-jerky list.

'Wallace and Gromit: Curse of the Were-Rabbit': Aardman is best known for Wallace and Gromit, a fuzzy-brained Brit and his silently judging dog. They've starred in three Oscar-winning short films as well as this Oscar-winning 2005 feature, in which they battle a dastardly nobleman (Ralph Fiennes) when a snooty gardener (Helena Bonham Carter) hires them to protect her garden from mutant rabbits. Both a spoof of vintage horror movies and English giant-vegetable competitions (for real), "Were-Rabbit" is a gem.

'James and the Giant Peach': Henry Selick has directed just four movies and none since the excellent stop-motion "Coraline" in 2009. His best is this 1996 Roald Dahl adaptation, which combines live action with stop-motion to tell the story of an orphan boy who befriends a bunch of insects on his way from England to New York in an enormous, flying piece of fruit. There's good news for Selick fans, though: Next year he'll return with an animated film that also reunites Jordan Peele and Keegan-Michael Key, "Wendell and Wild."

'ParaNorman': The title character feels like an outsider in his Massachusetts town, mostly because he hangs out a lot in the cemetery, speaking to the dead. Grief is a big theme in this 2012 movie, but it's an affectionate parody of classic mid-century horror movies. "ParaNorman" also takes smart chances with its vivid characters, including one who has become a source of comfort for young LGBTQ folks.

'Anomalisa': By far the oddest film on this list is Charlie Kaufman's R-rated, adults-only 2015 drama, featuring the vocal talents of David Thewlis and Jennifer Jason Leigh. Its main character thinks all people look the same until he meets a woman who helps him get in touch with his own humanity. The medium is the message here — somehow, the inanimate objects in Kaufman's sad romance seem more human than human.

Adele makes country music debut

From news services

Adele is taking the country music business by storm.

Much like Lil Nas X did in 2019 with "Old Town Road," the British vocal powerhouse has made it to the country music charts with a superstar collaboration. "Easy On Me" (featuring Chris Stapleton) has debuted at No. 25 on Billboard's Country Airplay chart dated Nov. 27.

The power piano ballad, which sat atop the Billboard Hot 100 chart for four consecutive weeks, makes — according to the outlet — "unprecedented airplay chart history" with 5.4 million audience impressions.

Released Nov. 19, the collaborative version can only be heard on country music radio outlets and via the deluxe version of Adele's new album, "30." To date, no streaming distribution platforms has access to the song.

The Academy and Grammy Award winner pegged Stapleton as a "dream duet partner" during an appearance for Vogue's popular "73 Questions." Adele covered Stapleton and the SteelDrivers single "If It Hadn't Been For Love" for bonus versions of her 2011 album "21."

"Basically, I've been a fan of (Stapleton) since SteelDriver days," she recently told Rolling Stone. "I've been covering SteelDrivers for like nearly 12 years now. It's just ... his voice is just (expletive) brilliant."

"Easy On Me" has been ranked as the most played song in U.S. radio history.

McLean congratulates Swift for breaking record: Don McLean congratulated Taylor Swift after her 10-minute edition of "All Too Well" broke his "American Pie" record for longest song to reach the No. 1 spot on Billboard's Hot 100 singles chart.

"Let's face it, nobody ever wants to lose that #1 spot, but if I had to lose it to somebody, I sure am glad it was another great singer/songwriter such as Taylor," McLean recently tweeted.

McLean's seminal "American Pie" is eight minutes and 42 seconds long. He had held the record since 1971, when the song came out. Swift debuted her longer version of "All Too Well" this month as part of her release of the "Red (Taylor's Version)" album.

ABC plans 'A Very Boy Band Holiday': ABC is throwing "A Very Boy Band Holiday," featuring members of multiple boy bands from the '80s and '90s performing some of their hits mixed with a few classic holiday favorites.

The holiday special airing Dec. 6 includes New Edition's Bobby Brown and Michael Bivins; Boyz II Men's Wanya Morris and Shawn Stockman; Joey McIntyre of New Kid's On The Block; 98 Degrees' Nick and Drew Lachey, Jeff Timmons and Justin Jeffre; and NSYNC's Joey Fatone, Chris Kirkpatrick and Lance Bass.

There will also be members from the Backstreet Boys and O-Town, along with a special performance of "This One's For The Children" by McIntyre and his son Griffin. In addition, Fatone and Morris will debut a new holiday track.

Nov. 27 birthdays: Director Kathryn Bigelow is 70. TV personality Bill Nye is 66. Actor William Fichtner is 65. Musician Maria Schneider is 61. Actor Fisher Stevens is 58. Actor Robin Givens is 57. Actor Elizabeth Marvel is 52. Actor Kirk Acevedo is 50. Rapper Twista is 48. Actor Jaleel White is 45. Actor Lashana Lynch is 34.

ASK AMY

Friend needs another kind of wake-up call

Dear Amy: I have a friend who I love dearly, but she's crossed over a couple of lines with me lately, and I have gently cut her off.

She is a drama queen and is constantly having relationship problems.

The other day she texted me at 3 a.m., telling me she was leaving her boyfriend. She showed up at my house at 5 a.m. with her 16-year-old daughter "Cynthia" in tow.

After telling me how horrible her boyfriend is and saying inappropriate things in front of her daughter, the next day she was back with her boyfriend.

When I heard this news, I told her to please talk to her other friends because I was stepping back.

She is also a recreational drug user, and I absolutely cannot be around that.

Now she is upset at me, telling me that she would never turn her back on me.

Am I wrong?

— Backed Away

Dear Backed Away: Yes, backing away from this friend sounds like the best thing for you, but there is a teenager in this equation, and I hope you will extend a hand toward her.

Because you are exiting from this friendship, you might as well be completely honest about your reasons: "I am terrified that you and your daughter are in this dangerous situation, but it seems I can't help you any longer because nothing I do seems to make a difference. Your choices and your drug use are harmful to you and this beautiful teenage girl. You both deserve so much better."

Perhaps you could give your phone number to "Cynthia." It is doubtful that she would use it, but it sounds as if she needs a safe place and a safe person to turn to.

Dear Amy: My father has a habit of giving cash to my brother and me, if we are going on a family vacation.

He has done this since we were children, so we could treat ourselves while away. This continues, even now that we are adults with careers of our own.

Dad is not a man of many words, and I know this is a way of showing affection.

On a trip this year, he gave us each $350 in cash.

My husband thinks this is weird. He disapproves.

He gets upset when I accept money from my father, so I have stopped telling him about it, but if he finds out about it, then he is upset that I hid it from him. He acts as though I'm being dishonest.

It hurts my father's feelings if I decline the gift.

This puts me in a terrible spot, choosing between my father's generosity and my husband's good graces.

I don't think what my father is doing is unreasonable. Am I wrong?

— Conflicted

Dear Conflicted: In my opinion, what your father is doing is generous and sweet.

I agree with your take on this — that this is one tangible way your dad shows you how he feels about you.

It's the sort of bestowing that people of few words will engage in.

If your dad grew up with few resources, this sort of generosity makes him feel good. It reminds him that he has made it in life.

Your husband disapproves. His own father may show his affection differently — or perhaps — not at all. That's why he is so threatened by this largesse.

You should find a way to convey to him: "Honey, you can either enjoy this gift along with me, or go and sulk. It's your choice."

Dear Amy: "Family Afterthought" expressed frustration that their birthday falls on or near Thanksgiving every year. I too, have a holiday birthday. Mine is Christmas Day.

My parents quickly told everyone that it was not my fault when I was born and that we would celebrate both Christmas and my birthday as two separate events, never joined.

Our family celebrates Christmas on Christmas Eve and my birthday on Christmas Day.

I have had only two "real" birthday parties, both surprises.

This has worked for me and my "birthdays" are some of my most cherished memories.

— Another Holiday Birthday

Dear Another: A Christmas birthday truly offers up challenges, as well as abundant decorating ideas.

I assume that at least once during your childhood you were photographed lying in a manger, attended by three Wise Men bearing gifts?

Chemistry of Plant, Krauss clicks again on follow-up

Pairing Alison Krauss' angelic soprano with Robert Plant's roguish tenor once sounded like a bizarre idea — until they started to sing together. The improbable partnership produced the hit album "Raising Sand" in 2007, and their chemistry clicks again on the long-awaited follow-up, "Raise the Roof."

Plant and Krauss stick to the formula that worked before and still ignores pop trends.

Producer T Bone Burnett returns to oversee spare, rootsy arrangements and direct a stellar supporting cast that includes guitarist Marc Ribot, drummer Jay Bellerose and Krauss' brother, bassist Viktor Krauss.

The songs are again an eclectic collection that includes covers of obscure rockabilly, country and folk tunes, with sources ranging from the Everly Brothers and Allen Toussaint to Calexico and Merle Haggard.

Krauss and Plant focus on love and loss, with death a recurring character. "Leave me out, let the buzzards eat me whole," they sing on "Last Kind Words Blues."

In spite of the album title, former Led Zeppelin frontman Plant lets loose only occasionally. The strongest echoes of his former band come on a delightful rendition of the Pops Staples gospel tune "Somebody Was Watching Over Me," pushed along by Jimmy Page-style guitar that lingers at the end.

But it's the vocal mix that leaves a lasting impression. Harmony involves difference, and as Krauss and Plant draw on their disparate backgrounds in bluegrass and arena rock, what emerges is a musical marvel. Singing together at the end of the British folk tune "Go Your Way," they each squeeze 12 notes from a single syllable, finding beauty even in the word "woe." — Steven Wine, Associated Press

Sting's new album is aptly titled "The Bridge" — we need one. In almost every song there is water.

It is rushing in the opening song, in the form of rain in another and as a cold gray sea in a third. Water is in a glass the parched singer asks for in the second song and in mist in the seventh. The title song tells of a swollen river, and the fields are drowned.

"The Bridge" is a moody and varied collection in an unmoored time, with nods to Scripture, ancient allegories and malevolent characters. It's a strong album from a singer-songwriter who sees warning signs ahead. "This is my lonely mission/ To wake the world up to its fate," Sting sings.

The outlier is the first single, "If It's Love," a relentlessly cheerful tune with happy whistling, a Broadway-like song delivered with a smile that seems to surprise even the singer who created it. ("The reason's hard for me to trace," Sting acknowledges.)

Elsewhere is dread and a steady menace. One of Sting's wastrel characters wakes up in a married woman's bed in "The Bells of St. Thomas" and notes drily of "The last days of judgment upon us."

In the Celtic-tinged "The Hills on the Border," a malevolent spirit tempts a traveler, and a husband confronts a cheating spouse in the murky synth-laden "Loving You," singing "I pray the waters of forgiveness/ Will rain down on you and me."

Repeated listens reveal connections between songs.

The terrifically funky "Rushing Water" references the Book of Numbers, which is the title of the third song. A hammer to the head is repeated in "Rushing Water" and "The Bells of St. Thomas."

And, of course, water is everywhere. Even the bonus tracks are drenched with it: the traditional "Waters of Tyne" and a cover of "(Sittin' on) The Dock of the Bay."

It is an album to raise a glass — of anything but water — and cheer.

HOROSCOPES

Tarot.com

Aries (March 21-April 19): Stubborn attitudes can get you in trouble. The more flexible you are, the easier it will be to improve. Even if you're an expert in your field, that doesn't mean you have nothing left to learn. Be open to a different perspective.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): The prospect of getting revenge may be tempting. Just thinking about someone who caused issues in your life could fill you with anger and resentment. It's totally understandable that you want to lash out, but rising above your fury will have more long-term benefits.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Misunderstandings abound today, and it could be easy to take offense at an innocent remark. Make an effort to wait before responding to a comment that hurts your feelings. Being analytical or logical about emotions might really help you maintain necessary tactful silences.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Pleasant distractions can prove therapeutic. The last thing you want is to let anxiety compromise your health! Listening to relaxing music, meditating or practicing deep breathing exercises helps keep dark thoughts at bay. When in doubt, remind yourself of everything that's already worked out for you.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Fearful energy could make it difficult for you to take a risk today. The prospect of losing what you have may be a bit unnerving, and it's OK to postpone any bold moves for another day when your natural courage returns. In fact, being cautious could pay off unexpectedly.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): It may be particularly difficult to meet a family member in the middle. No matter how gracefully you try to avoid a topic, they might continue to harp on it! Keeping your distance may be the only way to avoid an argument. But not everybody disagrees with your ideas.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): To make a good impression, try to practice discretion. Even if it feels counterintuitive, you'll probably be glad you held back when communicating with someone who's a tad judgmental. The less ammunition you give, the more difficult it will be for naysayers to defame you.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Stressful energy could be keeping you awake at night. If you want to cultivate a calmer emotional state, make an effort to focus on the prosperity you have in your life. Keep your mind on things that make you feel happy, including anything from food on the table to comfy pillows to loyal friends.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Feelings may be running high. You may not approve of a higher-ups destabilizing outbursts, but while it's true this behavior can be upsetting, it can also lend insight to this leaders character. Knowing what motivates and angers them could actually improve your career prospects.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Fixating on the past won't solve anything. It's fine to look back fondly on bygone eras, but you should limit this reminiscing in favor of an opportunity to expand your future horizons. Making a list of things in your life that you appreciate can cause those blessings to grow.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Today's tense energy could inhibit your plans. The prospect of public speaking might fill you with dread. If you must make a presentation, try to find ways to relax yourself beforehand,. Projecting an air of calm will likely make your audience receptive to whatever you say.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Your desire to get ahead may be undermining a relationship. Keep your dream in perspective. Successful professionals have happy personal lives. Keep this in mind when your friends or loved ones invite you out — a night on the town may be just what you need to raise your spirits. Have some fun today!

Opening lead — king of clubs.

A two-edged sword

In notrump play, declarer often refuses to win the opening lead even though he has the ace of the suit led.

This refusal to win the trick, called a holdup play, usually occurs when declarer is under attack in a suit where he is relatively weak.

The ace is withheld in the hope of disrupting enemy communications.

The holdup during suit play is much less common, but it can be just as effective as the holdup play in notrump.

Consider this deal where South gets to five diamonds and West leads the king of clubs.

If South takes the king with the ace, he goes down one against best defense. Whenever declarer leads a club, West wins with the jack and shifts to a low spade. East's king forces the ace, and declarer winds up losing two clubs and a spade. But if South refuses to win the king of clubs, he makes the contract regardless of what West does next.

Suppose West plays another club. South takes the ace, draws trump and returns a club. Dummy's clubs thus become established and take care of South's spade loser.

Now suppose West shifts to a low spade at trick two. Declarer wins East's king with the ace, draws trump and returns a spade, establishing dummy's jack as a parking place for his second club loser.

Observe that there is no risk attached to ducking the king of clubs. Even if East has only one club, South cannot lose more than two tricks.

If West continues with a club, it makes no difference whether or not East ruffs; either way, declarer cannot be stopped from establishing dummy's fifth club as his game-going trick.

HIGH SCHOOL FOOTBALL CIAC PLAYOFFS

Rockville, Ellington to meet again

By Lori Riley
Hartford Courant

The Rockville and Ellington football teams played on Wednesday night for a Thanksgiving Day game. The two teams will play again, less than a week later, in the Class M quarterfinals at Rockville.

The CIAC football playoff schedule was released Friday morning, a year after there was no football due to the pandemic. The quarterfinals will be played Tuesday at the higher seed, the semifinals will be Dec. 5 at the higher seed and the championship games will be Dec. 11 at Trumbull High and Veterans Stadium in New Britain.

No. 2 seeded Rockville beat seventh-seeded Ellington Wednesday 27-7. The Rams will host Ellington on Tuesday at 6:30 p.m.

For starters

- Class S top seed and undefeated Bloomfield leads the playoff field with 1,900 points according to the CIAC's formula.
- Bloomfield and Class S No. 2 seed Cromwell/Portland are the only 10-0 teams in the field. Killingly (9-0) is also undefeated.
- After meeting on Thanksgiving Eve, Ellington and Rockville play again Tuesday in Class M
- Windsor, the No. 5 seed in Class L, had its only loss of the season to St. Joseph, a team the Warriors could meet in the final.
- Complete schedule of Tuesday's quarterfinals, Page 8

Undefeated Bloomfield is the No. 1 seed in Class S and will be looking to erase the memory of a 64-33 loss to Sheehan in 2019. Bloomfield will host No. 8 seed Morgan in the first round. Cromwell/Portland, the No. 2 seed in Class S, is also undefeated and will host No. 7 seed Notre Dame-Fairfield (7-2) Tuesday night.

Windsor's only loss came to 2019 Class L champion St. Joseph-Trumbull, 45-22, on Sept. 24. The two could potentially face each in the Class L semifinal if fifth-seeded Windsor beats Cheney Tech and No. 1 seed St. Joseph (whose only loss is to Darien) gets

UCONN FOOTBALL

The final snaps of a 'dream'

Seniors like Keating cherishing every last moment as season comes to an end

By Dom Amore
Hartford Courant

An era will end for UConn football on Saturday, and while some might be glad to hear that, there are also some who wouldn't trade these last few years, despite the losses and upheaval.

Brian Keating, for example, the long-snapper from Darien and one of those being honored as their eligibility elapses with the season finale against Houston, Saturday at noon at Rentschler Field.

"Everything to me has been so special," Keating said this week. "Growing up in Connecticut, I always thought about playing for UConn, but I never thought my dream would come true."

The 6-foot Keating, like any good long-snapper, is a handy guy to have around. Imagine not having one?

He has held down the position through all of 2017, '18 and '19, and most of 2021, when not recovering from a wrist injury. As he has earned his degree in sports management, and now works to complete a master's, he's polished his unique skill, strengthening his hamstrings, core, triceps and hands to get it to the punter or holder in 0.75 seconds or less, which is the NFL standard.

"All I know is, in three years, he has been accurate, with a quick release," Lou Spanos said. "I see him being looked at and hopefully has an opportunity."

In the meantime, Keating is looking for an internship in the sports industry. "I'm itching to find that next thing," he said

The end of this season for UConn, 1-10, 0-9 vs. FBS opponents, will come against Houston, a former AAC rival that is peaking at 10-1, ranked 17th in the country.

Whaley returns, pushes Huskies across finish line in ugly OT win

By Alexa Philippou
Hartford Courant

PARADISE ISLAND, Bahamas — In his return from a one-game absence due to a fainting episode at the end of Wednesday's double-overtime thriller versus Auburn, Isaiah Whaley came through in the clutch to push the UConn men's basketball team through their Battle 4 Atlantis finale in the Bahamas.

Whaley hit his first three 3s of the season, including one to force overtime and another to kick off the Huskies' scoring in extra time, to help No. 22 UConn grind out a 70-63 win over Virginia Commonwealth Friday, its second time playing in overtime in three games.

With wins over Auburn and VCU and a loss to Michigan State, UConn (6-1) comes away with a third-place finish in the annual holiday event. No. 6 Baylor defeated the Spartans 75-58 earlier in the day to win the tournament crown.

"We knew what our real goal was when we came here. We wanted to be playing against Baylor in that 11 a.m. game," UConn's R.J. Cole said. "We didn't have that chance, but we knew that we couldn't come out here without two wins, so we made sure that we were successful in that part."

Not to be overlooked, Cole led the Huskies in scoring and also had his clutch moments, finishing with a game-high 26 points. Whaley, who also had the win-sealing dunk-and-one with four seconds to play, was the only other UConn player to reach double figures with 16.

"It's been a roller coaster," Whaley said of his last few days. "I really, really wanted to play [Thursday versus Michigan State], and I was shut down. But it was a good thing I was shut down."

Whaley said he's been constantly prompted to eat and drink water following Wednesday's incident, what UConn called a result of "a

Killington ready to host World Cup again as best return to US

By Keith Pearson
Boston Herald

Even during a typical World Cup season, American skiers don't get a chance to enjoy the comforts of home for very long. Add in a pandemic that forced FIS, skiing's governing body, to cancel the North American leg last season and remain in Europe for the entire winter then it's easy to understand why the women are excited to be racing this weekend in Killington, Vt., in the HomeLight Killington Cup.

"I'm so happy and excited to be back on home soil in the U.S.," said Paula Moltzan, a Minnesota native who lives in Charlemont during the offseason. "I'm pretty familiar with Vermont/Killington area. It's really nice to have friends and family in the crowd when you come across the finish line, you know you can make them proud when you're skiing down. It's a pretty special feeling after not being on home soil for so long."

Her best Killington finish was 17th in the 2018 slalom. She jumped 11 places from her first run by having the fourth-fastest second run.

This weekend's events are the technical disciplines with the giant slalom scheduled for Saturday and slalom on Sunday. Both races will

Barkley: Coaches asked players for input on offense

Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — The firing of Jason Garrett as New York Giants offensive coordinator isn't going to drastically change the way the team plays when it has the ball.

Star running back Barkley admitted Friday there might be a few new wrinkles on offense and players have been asked by the coaching staff to discuss plays they like to run so they can be included in the game play. However, he also noted the playbook isn't rewritten 12 weeks into a season and the terminology is the same.

What has to change is the way the players execute the game plan on Sunday, when the Giants (3-7) face the Philadelphia Eagles (5-6) at MetLife Stadium.

Coach Joe Judge is hoping the staff shakeup get his offense to perform better.

"You can say what you want about coaches, but at the end of the day, like I said after the game against the Bucs, as players we've got to take some responsibility about it, too, and go out there and make plays," Barkley said.

The Giants were held to season lows in total yards, points and time of possession in their 30-10 loss to Tampa Bay on Monday night. They have had a short week to prepare for the Eagles, who have won two straight and three of four.

Judge said the remaining offensive coaches combined to come up with a game plan for this week. The coaches turned to the players for help.

"We're going to be the ones running the plays," Barkley said. "If you've got your five top runs, come let me know your five top runs. Like these five plays that you know and you believe that are going to work, let me know the play that you believe is going to work. Just be open, be honest, the plays that we like, the plays that we don't like."

It kind of put the players on the spot, and Barkley is definitely one of them. He missed all but one game last season after tearing an ACL against the Bears in Week 2. He went through a major rehabilitation to return for the opener but things have not gone as planned. The offensive line was banged up early, then Barkley sprained an ankle against Dallas on Oct. 10 and missed the next four games.

The 2018 NFL Offensive Rookie of the Year returned against the Bucs but didn't do much. He had six carries for 25 yards and caught six passes for 31 yards.

Barkley seems to be searching for the things that made him one of the NFL's most feared running backs in his first two seasons. He has carried 60 times this season for 220 yards and two touchdowns.

"It feels weird, it's frustrating. But you know, that comes with some of the unfortunate things that happened to me the last two years," Barkley said. "It's part of it, it's part of it, it's part of the journey, it's part of the story."

Barkley said his goal is the work through the problems and re-establish his career.

"I'm going to look back on these moments and these dark times and these frustrating times and know that these are the moments that helped mold me, become the player that I am and the player that I am going to continue to be and going to be in the future," he said.

Barkley has been listed as questionable for the game after limited practice this week, but he says he will play.

"It should be a really good game," Barkley said. "It's always a good game when we get to go against each other. Just got to do what we do and hopefully come out with a win."

Notes: The Giants placed defensive back Nate Ebner on injured reserve on Friday with a knee injury. He will miss Sunday's game along with wide receiver Sterling Shepard (quad), tight end Kaden Smith (knee) and fullback Cullen Gillaspia (quad). Tight end Kyle Rudolph (ankle) and receiver Kadarius Toney (quad) are doubtful after being hurt on Monday.

Richard Seymour became a linchpin of the Patriots defense as the team won three titles in four years from 2001-04. He was an All-Pro pass rusher during two of those years. AP FILE

Seymour, Wilfork get Belichick's vote for Hall

By Nicole Yang
Boston Globe

FOXBOROUGH, Mass. — Former Patriots defensive tackles Richard Seymour and Vince Wilfork are in Bill Belichick's personal Hall of Fame, but whether they will be enshrined in Canton, Ohio, is still to be determined.

"In my Hall of Fame, those two guys are there without a doubt," Belichick said Friday morning.

Seymour and Wilfork are two of the 26 semifinalists for the Pro Football Hall of Fame's Class of 2022. The 15 finalists will be revealed in January. Seymour has been a semifinalist for the past five years and a finalist for the last two, while Wilfork is a first-time nominee.

Belichick shared the utmost praise for both players, lauding them as the two best defensive linemen he's ever coached. He called Seymour "impossible to match up against" and Wilfork "impossible to block in the running game."

When reflecting on Wilfork's strength and size, Belichick referenced his critical role in the 2011 AFC Championship game against Baltimore.

On a third and 3 late in the fourth quarter, with the ball on New England's 30-yard line and the Ravens trailing, 23-20, Ravens quarterback Joe Flacco handed the ball off to Ray Rice, only for Wilfork to fight through the offensive line and tackle Rice for a loss of 3 yards. The Ravens decided to go for it on fourth and 6, but Wilfork came up big again, getting to Flacco and forcing him to fire an errant pass for an incompletion.

"He really won that game with his fourth-quarter pass rush on Flacco up the middle of the pocket," said Belichick.

Seymour played eight seasons for Belichick, winning three Super Bowls, and Wilfork played 11, winning two Super Bowls. Both had their fair share of Pro Bowl nods and All-Pro honors, too.

Jackson looks long term: Cornerback J.C. Jackson said he "would love to be a New England Patriot for a long time," but he's trying not to think about his contract situation.

"I love playing for the New England Patriots, playing under Coach Belichick," said Jackson, who is set to become an unrestricted free agent this offseason. "I have grown as a football player since I've been here. I've learned the game.

"There's a lot of older guys on this team, so I have picked up a lot of knowledge from these guys who have been in this organization for a long time. I love it here, man."

Injury report: The Patriots have 10 players listed as questionable for Sunday's game against the Titans: punter Jake Bailey (right knee), defensive lineman Christian Barmore (knee), Ja'Whaun Bentley (ribs), offensive lineman Trent Brown (calf), kicker Nick Folk (left knee), running back Damien Harris (neck), tight end Hunter Henry (neck), linebacker Dont'a Hightower (ankle), tight end Jonnu Smith (shoulder), and running back Rhamondre Stevenson (knee). Bailey, Bentley, Brown, Folk, Hightower, and Smith were also questionable for last week's game in Atlanta, but all played ... The Patriots signed defensive lineman Niles Scott to their practice squad. The 26-year-old Scott has bounced around multiple practice squads since entering the league as an undrafted free agent out of Frostburg State in 2018. He has appeared in six NFL games, logging four tackles.

JETS

Williams making his own name as fierce tackler

Associated Press

FLORHAM PARK, N.J. — Quincy Williams has been tackling his way out of his younger brother's massive shadow for years.

The New York Jets linebacker, who's almost 16 months older than teammate and sibling Quinnen, was the "other" Williams brother through high school and college. And then in the biggest moments of their football careers.

Quinnen was the first-round pick of the Jets in 2019 out of Alabama, the third overall selection. He was a 6-foot-3, 300-pound national champion considered one of the premier defensive lineman in the country.

Meanwhile, Quincy waited until the next night when he went in the third round to Jacksonville. He was a 5-11, 230-pound lesser-known linebacker at Murray State.

"When I first got drafted, the thing was, who is Quincy Williams?" he recalled Friday. "And everybody was like, 'Oh, that's Quinnen who played for Alabama's brother. So most people would take it as like, 'I'm a person, I'm a person,' and just be mad about it. But then I just put that as a chip on my shoulder like I had to make a name for myself.

"That's the realest thing, so I use it as like ammunition, for real."

It certainly shows in his play.

While Quinnen is a space-eating run stuffer who shoves offensive linemen aside on his way to taking down quarterbacks, Quincy is a heat-seeking missile who slams into anyone trying to get past him.

"My No. 1 thing is just running through people," said a smiling Quincy Williams, who ranks second to C.J. Mosley with a career-high 51 tackles. "So that's the main thing. And at first, it's like the crowd 'ooohs.' I love that. It feeds me. Then all of a sudden, it's my teammates that get hyped about it. ...

"So it's basically like me setting the tone for my teammates and my teammates rallying behind it. And I love that part of it."

He started in place of Jarrad Davis last week and had 15 total tackles in New York's 24-17 loss to Miami, the most for a Jets player since David Harris had 17 in 2009.

"One of his superpowers is speed," coach Robert Saleh said. "He's one of the faster linebackers in football, if you just look at his GPS numbers. He has the luxury of taking a step before triggering because whatever he lost at the snap, he can regain because he's so fast and long."

Jets defensive coordinator Jeff Ulbrich remembers scouting Williams at Murray State leading up to the draft and loving what he saw.

"I fought hard to try to get him in Atlanta and for us to draft him," Ulbrich recalled. "Obviously, it didn't work out. Spent a day with him, worked him out, the whole deal. He's got that stuff you can't coach. He's got obviously the athleticism, the explosiveness, the speed and all of that. He's also got instincts that are really rare.

"He can't always articulate what he sees, but he sees it and he reacts. At the same time, he's a hitter."

"You have like your way, then you have the professional way," Williams said. "So I want to be a pro in this league a long time."

And with each fierce tackle, force everyone to know his name.

Wolf Pack rally past Springfield, 5-3

Staff report

HARTFORD - Zac Jones' goal 34 seconds into the second period was the first of five unanswered goals and the Wolf Pack defeated the Springfield Thunderbirds 5-3 in an AHL game on Friday night at the XL Center.

After Springfield had taken a 2-0 lead after the first period, Jones cut into the lead early in the second and goals by Jonny Brodzinski, Lauri Pajuniemi and Anthony Bitetto followed. Tim Gettinger closed out the scoring for Hartford (12-3-2-0) at 1:19 of the third period.

Keith Kinkaid had 24 saves for the Wolf Pack, who now trail the first-place Thunderbirds by two points in the Atlantic Division.

Panarin starts 3-goal third to put Boston away

Associated Press

BOSTON — Artemi Panarin scored the first of New York's three third-period goals with 8:25 left and the Rangers beat the Boston Bruins 5-2 on Friday afternoon, giving Gerard Gallant the best start in his first 20 games as coach in team history.

The Rangers have 31 points in Gallant's first 20. Phil Esposito held the previous mark with 30 in 1986-87.

"I would say it's a good feeling," Ryan Strome said of New York's 13-4-3 start. "But I also think that it's a group that's not satisfied. We're starting to feel like a winning team. Two-two in Boston in the past, we're young, we're a little fragile and I don't know what could happen."

Strome, Dryden Hunt, Alexis Lafreniere and Jacob Trouba also scored for the Rangers, who won their third straight game and seventh of eight.

Igor Shesterkin made 29 saves and Julien Gauthier set up two goals. Trouba's was an empty-netter.

Craig Smith and Patrice Bergeron each had a goal for Boston, which has lost consecutive home games after opening 6-1. Jeremy Swayman stopped 31 shots.

"They like to funnel pucks from all angles," Swayman said of giving up some rebounds. "They get good traffic in front. You've got to do whatever you can to prevent those rebounds."

Panarin batted home a pass from Gauthier from the edge of the crease for the Rangers' first lead of the game. Lafreniere scored with 3:38 to play on Gauthier's wing-to-wing pass during a 2-on-1 break.

The Bruins had taken a 2-1 lead in the second when Bergeron, just outside the crease, redirected Matt Grzelcyk's perfectly centered touch pass from the left circle into the net.

"It's early in the year," Boston forward Brad Marchand said. "We have a lot of new faces in our group. It's a different year for us, a lot different than we've had in a long time where we have to build something."

CORONAVIRUS

New variant strikes sports

By Gerald Imray
Associated Press

CAPE TOWN, South Africa — Golf, cricket and rugby became the first major sports to be affected by the new COVID-19 variant Friday, prompting fears of renewed travel restrictions and disrupted events just as they were returning to normal nearly two years into the pandemic.

European golfers withdrew midway through the season-opening DP World Tour tournament in Johannesburg and were scrambling to catch flights out of South Africa. Visiting cricket and rugby teams did the same.

Golf was the first to be hit by the emergence of the new B.1.1.529 variant that was initially identified in South Africa and is causing concern over fears that it may be more transmissible than current variants and resistant to vaccines.

It has already been detected in Israel, Hong Kong and Belgium as well as several other countries in southern Africa.

While the start of the World Tour was ruined, rugby games in South Africa in a new European-South African tournament were postponed "due to the sudden developments," organizers said. A tour to South Africa by India's cricket team next month was likely to be reconsidered, although there was no official comment yet.

The Dutch cricket team, already in South Africa for a series, was considering whether to cancel its remaining games and return home early. The Royal Netherlands Cricket Federation said it was looking at options but was "unlikely" to be able to find flights at short notice.

"The physical and mental health of the players is the first priority," the federation said.

Organizers of golf's Joburg Open said it would continue even after at least 23 mostly European players pulled out in the hours after South African health authorities announced they had detected the new variant. The tournament was later reduced to a 54-hole, three-round event ending on Saturday "to help non-South African resident players, caddies and tournament support staff return to their home countries," organizers said.

The Joburg Open was scheduled to be the first of three events in South Africa to start the new season on the circuit formerly known as the European Tour. But next week's South African Open will now only be a South African tour event with international players likely to head home to beat travel restrictions. The Alfred Dunhill Championship set for Dec. 9-12 was canceled.

The British government announced it would re-impose a ban on visitors from South Africa and five other southern African countries from 4 a.m. Sunday. The European Union and the United States later said they also would stop air travel from the southern African region as countries across the world began putting in place new travel restrictions.

Four rugby teams — two from Wales, one from Ireland and one from Italy — were also trying to return home from South Africa before they even had the chance to play after their games were postponed by the United Rugby Championship.

"With the situation in South Africa having changed so quickly, we are now looking to repatriate our staff ASAP," Welsh club Cardiff said.

IN BRIEF

Dayton beats buzzer to upset the Jayhawks

News services

Mustapha Amzil's lone basket of the game was a memorable one.

Amzil hit a running jumper in the lane at the buzzer, and Dayton beat No. 4 Kansas 74-73 on Friday.

Kansas' David McCormack blocked Malachi Smith's layup with 3 seconds left. Amzil picked up the loose ball, and his shot went off the rim and backboard before going in.

"It was great," Amzil said. "I had to watch the ball bounce in and down. It's hard to describe. It's surreal. It's a great feeling."

It was Amzil's only shot from the field. He also went 2 for 4 at the free-throw line.

"Obviously great presence of mind by Mustapha to know the clock and give us a chance," Dayton coach Anthony Grant said. "We're grateful the shot fell."

Kansas coach Bill Self said after McCormack's block it was "good fortune, bad fortune."

"The bottom line is, we didn't execute when we needed to," Self said.

College football: Jordan Brookshire came off the bench and passed for 192 yards and a touchdown to lead No. 21 San Diego (11-1, 7-1) to 24 unanswered points in a 27-16 win over Boise State on Friday. The Aztecs completed their first 11-win regular season in 99 years of football.

MLB: The Mets and All-Star infielder Eduardo Escobar have agreed to a free agent contract. MLB Network reported the contract will pay Escobar $20 million over two years. The 32-year-old hit .253 with 28 homers, 90 RBIs and a .786 OPS last season.

NBA: LeBron James was fined $15,000 for an obscene gesture Friday by the NBA, which also warned the star about using profane language.

NHL: Sharks general manager Doug Wilson will take a temporary leave to deal with an undisclosed medical issue. The Sharks said Friday that assistant general manager Joe Will will take over the team's day-to-day operations during Wilson's absence.

combination of end-of-game excitement, fatigue and dehydration, which caused him to feel light-headed and dizzy." He was ruled out of the Michigan State game an hour before tip, but was cleared to play Friday as long as he didn't experience dizziness during warmups.

"When they gave me the call and said I can go, I had a lot of emotions and a lot of energy," Whaley said. "I felt really good playing."

On the heels of such an intense game and emotional last few days, Whaley let loose on his final score by punching and head-butting the stanchion.

But it didn't take his absence Thursday or huge presence Friday for Whaley's value to be clear to those around him.

"In terms of skill level or the gaudiest numbers, no, he's not the best all-around player, but he's our most important player," coach Dan Hurley said. "Winning didn't begin at UConn until he emerged."

Whaley's emphatic return was the highlight of an otherwise ugly game that featured lengthy scoring droughts, a copious amount of forced and unforced turnovers (36 in all) and 45 foul calls.

After the game's first basket, a Whaley 3, UConn trailed the rest of the first half, struggling with the Rams' trademark defensive pressure and committing a slew of turnovers. A pair of Tyler Polley free throws at the 4:23 mark tied things up at 20 apiece, but VCU got going offensively, scoring eight straight points.

Whaley gave the Huskies some life with a second-chance layup, then forcing a steal with less than 30 seconds remaining in the half that resulted in a Jalen Gaffney basket. Cole was fouled on his last-ditch effort at a half-court shot, making two of three from the line, to pull UConn within two (28-26) at the break — a respectable outcome considering UConn had as many turnovers as made field goals in the first 20 minutes (eight) and shot a paltry 27% (17% from 3).

"The way we handle pressure, we've got a lot of work to do," Hurley said. "We did some things with the ball today that were incredibly bizarre. We don't have the guards to just kind of dribble through [pressure] or give it to a guy who can just kind of put the pressure on his heels."

Finally converting on their shots, the Huskies came out of the half with a 7-0 run to retake the advantage on a Cole 3-pointer for the first time since it was 3-0. The teams traded leads before Gaffney's free throw granted the Huskies their biggest lead at 41-37, but VCU quickly responded with six unanswered points to crawl back ahead, later extending the advantage to three with a 10-3 run.

After the under-eight timeout, Cole took over with a 3 and and-one to tie things up two separate times. Hurley was pleased with the guard's playmaking and aggression all day. The coach had challenged him to play that way after he faltered on a specific play at the end of the Michigan State game.

"You've got to drag that [ball-screen] out and do what a UConn guard would do in that situation and go try to make the shot to put the game away," Hurley said he told Cole. "He did that all day long [Friday]."

VCU managed to pull ahead by four at the 3:21 mark, but Tyrese Martin's trey cut the deficit to one on the next play. A pair of VCU free throws allowed the Rams to creep ahead by three with 2:32 to go.

Whaley's 3 tied things up with just over a minute remaining, but, representative of the game as a whole, neither team was able to convert on their final possession. Cole's 3-point attempt with less than a second remaining bounced off the back of the rim.

Whaley wasn't about to let his comeback end in vain. He got UConn on the board with another 3 to start overtime, and the Huskies would never look back. He finished the day with perfect 3-3 shooting from the perimeter.

"If you were around us daily and you see him in the summer, he makes them," Hurley said of Whaley's 3-point shooting. "It hasn't translated to the court but I'm telling you he makes them... if we could ever get that from him, which he's capable of, it's just going to open up the court for us so much offensively."

Seniors

"They have speed and athleticism in all three phases," Spanos said, They're really well coached, playing at a good level right now."

The Cougars' pass rush will likely be too much for UConn to handle, their offense too potent to stop. That has been the case much of this season, with the Huskies losing six times by 30 or more points.

But through it all, seniors like Keating have kept the faith, tried to assert leadership. At the bleakest moments, Keating, while injured, could be seen leading the cheers on the sidelines.

"That's one reason he was a captain," Spanos said. "Off the field, in the weight room, conditioning, being positive, being a role model to his teammates, and his academics. He's always wired in, making us better."

Before the game, UConn will officially introduce Jim Mora, who will take the reigns immediately after the game. Since his hiring Nov. 11, Mora has been meeting the players and staff, making his evaluations. He and Keating chatted briefly at Clemson.

"He's going to be inheriting a really good group," Keating said, "a lot of really good potential at every position, a lot of guys that have learned to come together and a lot of energy. A lot of guys with high football IQ, a lot of guys with passion for the game, he's going to be inheriting a squad with a will to win that is ready to turn the table. I wish I could be a part of that."

Over these last two weeks, Keating has found himself trying to slow the hands on the clock that ticks inexorably to the end of his college football experience.

"I was able to graduate and achieve my dreams," Keating said. "These last couple of weeks, I've been taking longer to stare up into the crowd, laugh with my teammates, appreciate everything UConn has given me. It's been a tremendous experience."

Tale of the tape

UConn's offense: UConn showed some signs of offensive life at UCF last week. Nate Carter gained 77 yards on 13 carries, his best game in a while, and tight end Jay Rose caught 10 passes, a career high, for 89 yards. Most of their production came after they were trailing by four TDs.
UConn's defense: The Huskies were missing some key players on defense at UCF, including cornerback Jeremy Lucien, who has entered the transfer portal, and those who played were unable to keep up with the Knights' overall speed. This game will be another chance for UConn's top defensive players, especially those completing their eligibility, to show out on film for pro scouts.
Houston offense: The Cougars, averaging 416.1 yards per game, are as potent as any offense UConn has seen. Quarterback Clayton Tune has a 156.1 passer rating, with 22 TD passes against eight interceptions. Alton McCaskill (5.2 yards per carry) and Ta'Zhawn Henry (4.9) are the core of a productive running game. Nathaniel Dell, with 65 catches for 965 yards, is the top receiving target.
Houston defense: If it doesn't sound scary enough yet, Houston is fifth in FBS in total defense, 10th in sacks with 3.27 per game and third in turnover margin (22-10). Donavan Mutin (65 tackles) and Marcus Jones (five interceptions) have been standouts.
Key matchup: UConn tight end Rose vs. Houston wide receiver Keelan Marion, averaging 18.1 yards per catch, vs. Houston LB Deontay Anderson.
UConn player to watch: Keep an eye on all the seniors, who've given all they could to the program under through a difficult four or five years.
Cougar player to watch: DL Hasaan Hypolite, considered a pro prospect.
About Houston's coach: Dana Holgorsen, 50, left West Virginia, where he was 61-41 with seven Bowl appearances in eight years, to take over at Houston, where has performed a lightning-quick rebuild, from 4-8 to 3-5 to 10-1. As coordinator and head coach, he's earned a reputation for high-scoring offenses and developing quarterbacks.
Famous Houston alumni: Kenny Rogers, Robert Wuhl, and the Quaid brothers, Randy and Dennis, from show biz. Jim Nantz, Dan Rather, basketball greats Elvin Hayes, Clyde Drexler and Hakeem Olajuwan.

UCONN WOMEN'S BASKETBALL

Former player Poffenbarger transferring to Arkansas

By Alexa Philippou
Hartford Courant

Former UConn women's basketball player Saylor Poffenbarger announced via Twitter on Friday that she's transferring to Arkansas. The Huskies announced 11 days ago, one day after UConn opened its season versus the Razorbacks, that Poffenbarger, a 6-foot-2 guard, had entered the transfer portal. She reportedly visited her new school this past week, according to the Arkansas Democrat Gazette.

The Middletown, Maryland, player and former No. 30 recruit in the country appeared in 12 games last season for the Huskies, totaling six points (1-for-11 shooting on 3s) and four rebounds in 32 minutes. She never took the court this season due to injuries.

Poffenbarger won't be allowed to suit up for the Razorbacks until the 2022-23 season, at which point she'll have four years of eligibility.

Per the Democrat Gazette, Arkansas assistant coach Lacey Goldwire is Poffenbarger's godsister.

Poffenbarger's mother told the Frederick (Md.) News-Post that her decision to transfer from UConn was due to the school as a whole not being a good fit.

"It's been a conversation, and it's not all basketball," Amy Poffenbarger told the News-Post. "The academic [side] wasn't super-engaging, there wasn't much to the campus life, and there wasn't the ability to get out and meet a lot of people. Unfortunately that part of college life ... that part wasn't happening for her."

SUNS 118, KNICKS 97

Suns extend win streak to 15

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Devin Booker scored 32 points and the Phoenix Suns beat the New York Knicks 118-97 on Friday night for their 15th straight victory, matching the second-longest winning streak in franchise history.

Chris Paul had 14 points and 10 assists for the Suns, who improved to 16-3. The reigning Western Conference champions will try to wrap up a perfect four-game trip Saturday in a showdown with East-leading Brooklyn.

Phoenix also won 15 straight during the 2006-07 season. The Suns won a franchise-best 17 in a row later that season.

Deandre Ayton finished with 14 points and 13 rebounds. Booker was 14 for 27 from the field, making four 3-pointers. He did not attempt a free throw.

The Suns had to work hard to pull out victories in San Antonio and Cleveland to start the trip, but were in control most of the way at Madison Square Garden. They were ahead for the final three quarters and led by as much as 24 points.

Kemba Walker scored 17 points for the Knicks.

consist of a combined time from two runs with only the top 30 from the first run qualifying for the second run and racking up World Cup points.

Sunday will be the highlight of the weekend as Mikaela Shiffrin, the face of American skiing, attempts to remain unbeaten in Killington slaloms. She has won the event all four times since the Beast of the East made its World Cup debut in 2017. A victory would also give her 46 World Cup slalom victories, tying her with Ingemar Stenmark for the most wins in one discipline. The Swedish great won 46 giant slaloms during his career from 1974-89.

Each time Shiffrin led after the opening run resulting in her being the last skier down in the second run.

"Nobody leaves and everybody has to stay because the question is, 'Can she pull it off?' and basically she has ended the event by coming through the finish line in first and taking the win. People are going crazy," Killington president and general manager Mike Solimano told the Herald. "It's hard because now we just expect her to win. It's a lot of pressure."

Solimano said about 9,000 people are expected each day, about half of what the capacity was in 2019 as the resort will try to spread people out with consideration still being given for COVID-19.

Shiffrin, who has been battling a back injury, finished second to Slovakia's Petra Vlhova in both slaloms last weekend in Levi, Finland. They are tied for the overall lead with 250 points in the early portion of the season that stretches from late October to late March. Vlhova has finished second in the slalom each of the past three times at Killington.

The owner of three overall World Cup titles, eight World Cup discipline titles (6 slalom, 1 giant slalom, 1 super-G) and two Olympic gold medals (2014 slalom, 2018 giant slalom), Shiffrin attended high school at Vermont's Burke Mountain Academy, which has been the starting point for a number of American racers.

Joining Shiffrin will be Moltzan, AJ Hurt, Nina O'Brien and Keely Cashman. Zoe Zimmerman, 19, of Guilford, N.H., and Allie Resnick will each be making their World Cup debuts.

Moltzan, who was 24th on Sunday and 23rd in last month's season-opening giant slalom in Soelden, Austria, has one year left as a pre-med student at the University of Vermont and spends her summers as a whitewater raft guide on the Deerfield River along with her fiancé and coach Ryan Mooney.

The 27-year-old made her World Cup debut in November 2012, but she did not crack the top 30 until January 2016, her 14th start. Moltzan returned stateside and focused on school, winning the 2017 NCAA slalom title at Cannon Mountain in New Hampshire along the way, and returned to the World Cup part-time in 2018-19 and full-time the following season.

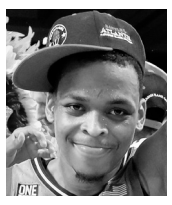
Injury-riddled Saints lost on offense

With a slew of key starters missing, the struggling Saints didn't know who to turn to or where to go on offense against the Bills. Most of the time they went nowhere, failing to score until the fourth quarter and losing 31-6 to the Bills on Thursday in a Thanksgiving prime-time mismatch. When the Bills went ahead 24-0 with 4:19 left in the third, the Saints had not converted a third down, had picked up just four first downs and had gained only 68 yards. Playing without running backs Alvin Kamara and Mark Ingram, offensive linemen Ryan Ramczyk and Andrus Peat, utility player Taysom Hill and tight end Adam Trautman, the injury-riddled Saints were unable to score until the first play of the fourth. "Obviously, it was difficult," coach Sean Payton, pictured, said. After the Bills scored a touchdown on their opening series, the Saints were fighting uphill the rest of the way. Trevor Siemian fell to 0-4 as a starting quarterback since replacing Jameis Winston, as the Saints lost their fourth in a row for the first time since 2015. The Saints have trailed by at least 17 in each of those games.

Baylor rolls MSU for Atlantis title



James Akinjo, pictured, held the MVP trophy as he danced on the court in a crowd of his new Baylor teammates. Around him bounced talented freshmen and multiple guys thriving in larger roles. The sixth-ranked Bears have a different look from last year's run to the national championship, but the results seem familiar — down to Scott Drew's club celebrating another title-clinching victory. Akinjo scored 15 points and Baylor beat Michigan State 75-58 on Friday for the Battle 4 Atlantis championship, using a balanced lineup to earn yet another lopsided win to start the season. "There's no great NBA team with one player," said Drew, his voice hoarse after three games in three days. "To win a championship, you've got to have a team, you've got to have a bench." The Bears (7-0) looked dominant as they took control early in the second half, throwing some full-court defensive looks at the Spartans (5-2) and capitalizing on their mistakes. By the end, Baylor turned a 38-36 halftime lead into a romp, with four double-figure scorers and three others with eight points.

Iowa rallies in 4th to top Nebraska

Spencer Petras ran for a 2-yard touchdown with 2:58 left to give 16th-ranked Iowa its first lead, and the Hawkeyes came back from a 15-point deficit in the third quarter to beat Nebraska 28-21 on Friday. Iowa won the border battle for the seventh straight year, along with the Heroes Trophy, but not before Jermari Harris intercepted Logan Smothers' pass at the Iowa 2 with 43 seconds to play. "It's a great feeling coming into a packed house and leaving with a trophy," Iowa star center, Tyler Linderbaum said. The Hawkeyes (10-2, 7-2) stayed alive in the Big Ten West race and now need Minnesota to beat Wisconsin on Saturday to go to the conference championship game next week in Indianapolis. The loss was another gut punch to Nebraska (3-9, 1-8) in its worst season since 1957. The Cornhuskers, who won't go to a bowl for a fifth straight year, finished with losses in six straight games and eight of nine. Their nine losses were by a total of 56 points. "Everything we've been through this year as a team, 99% of teams would have folded and quit," Nebraska coach Scott Frost said. "There's no quit in these guys. Sometimes life teaches you tough lessons. I appreciate the fight and commitment they've had. No one can say that group shut it down." —AP

Chance to be a head coach eludes Panthers' Holcomb

By Steve Reed
Associated Press

As an African American growing up in Queens, New York, Al Holcomb spent his fall Sundays watching Tom Landry and the Cowboys on television, and dreaming of one day becoming an NFL head coach.

The 51-year-old Holcomb has spent more than a quarter-century chasing that dream.

He has plenty of experience, working 26 years as an assistant coach, including the last 12 at the NFL level. He's been to two Super Bowls, winning one with the Giants, and has coached the likes of Luke Kuechly, Thomas Davis, Patrick Peterson and Chandler Jones. Yet Holcomb is still seeking his first interview for one of the NFL's coveted 32 head coaching jobs, which currently are held by only five minorities, three of whom are Black.

"I wake up every day with a mission that I have to be the best that I can be and have to dispel any myths or stereotypes that may be out there. And prove that I'm a smart football coach who can lead men, put together game plans, engage with the media and do all those kinds of things," Holcomb said, who currently serves as the defensive run game coordinator for the Panthers.

Weekly through the remainder of the regular season, The Associated Press will look at the NFL's coaching pipeline from the perspective of the coaches and executives who aim for the top jobs on and off the field, and the league institutions that have hindered them in their pursuit of those influential positions. Holcomb's immediate goal is to return to being a defensive coordinator, which often serves as a springboard to becoming a head coach.

He was at that precipice once, as Cardinals defensive coordinator in 2018. But head coach Steve Wilks, who is also Black, and the entire staff were fired after one season when the Cardinals failed to find an offensive identity and finished 3-13. Holcomb's defense finished fourth in the league against the pass and fifth in the league with 49 sacks, but struggled to stop the run.

Davis, who played linebacker for Holcomb in Carolina, described his former position coach as an excellent motivator who knows his personnel and has a natural talent for dissecting other teams' weaknesses and exploiting them. Davis said he was excited when Holcomb moved on to become a defensive coordinator, but disappointed he was let go after one season.

"I think what happened in Arizona really speaks to how minority coaches are being treated in this league," Davis said. "They didn't even give Wilks a chance to develop his own roster and to get things situated with him and Al. It was literally like they were on borrowed time."

Getting fired in Arizona was a huge blow for Holcomb, who has never been able to get back to that job level. And he knows he faces an uphill battle.

Pittsburgh's Mike Tomlin, Miami's Brian Flores and Houston's David Culley are the only Black head coaches in the league. Currently there is a growing tendency for NFL clubs to hire young coaches with backgrounds in offense. Holcomb said one of the biggest challenges in his climb up the coaching ranks was breaking into the league altogether. He never felt he had the right connections or contacts with people in the NFL because at that time there wasn't a program in place to help develop minority coaches.

While Holcomb said he's never felt like he's been passed over for a job opening because of the color of his skin, he believes "there's a lot of opportunities that are afforded to men who aren't of color that have had tremendously less experience."

"Maybe it's just not being in the right place at the right time," Holcomb said. "Maybe it's not winning enough. But I definitely think that as a minority coach that you have to show that you can do it, whereas sometimes when a non-minority coach has an opportunity they have to show that they can't do it."

Holcomb said the increased awareness from the media in recent years surrounding the lack of minority hires at top NFL level positions is a good thing, but added that "in terms of things truly changing, I don't see that much of a difference."

"Every year there's a new hot name, a young coach, one not of color, that gets an opportunity to lead a franchise, and you're sitting there going 'what did they necessarily do to get to that position?'" Holcomb said. "At the end of the day people are going to hire who they who they feel comfortable with. ... But I know that there's a lot of qualified men who are good football coaches and probably deserve an opportunity to at least get an interview and land some of these positions."

COLLEGE FOOTBALL STORYLINES

Spotlight shining on Michigan, OSU

By C.J. Doon | The Baltimore Sun

It's rivalry week, and that means there's plenty at stake in college football. Here's what to watch, starting with Saturday's two biggest games:

Here's your chance, Michigan: There are college recruits who have only seen Michigan beat Ohio State once in their lifetime. The Wolverines have lost eight straight and 15 of their past 16 against their archrival in a historic series that dates to the 19th century. It's been particularly lopsided of late, with the Buckeyes winning five of the past six games by 11 points or more.

So why should this year be any different?

Simply put, this might be coach Jim Harbaugh's best team since he came to Ann Arbor in 2015. The Wolverines rank fourth in ESPN's SP+, a tempo- and opponent-adjusted measure of efficiency, and while there's a bigger gap between Ohio State and Michigan in overall SP+ rating (32.3 vs. 24.0) than there is between Michigan and Tennessee (24.0 vs. 16.6), the Wolverines are still by far the toughest team the Buckeyes have faced this season.

If there's a reason for optimism, it's the Michigan defense. Aidan Hutchinson and David Njabo form perhaps the best pass-rushing duo in the country, recording a combined 19 of the team's 28 sacks. Daxton Hill has emerged as one of the nation's best safeties to solidify the secondary, but the Wolverines' corners will be tested by Ohio State's star trio of Chris Olave, Garrett Wilson and Jaxon Smith-Njigba. If Hutchinson and Njabo can win consistently off the edge to make quarterback C.J. Stroud uncomfortable in the pocket, Michigan's defensive backs have a chance. Otherwise, this game could get as lopsided as the Buckeyes' 56-7 rout of Michigan State last week.

A spot in the Big Ten title game is at stake, and likely a berth in the College Football Playoff, too. The Wolverines have caved under such pressure against their biggest rival, but this could finally be their moment to shine.

State championship: The rivalry is called Bedlam, but there's been nothing unpredictable about the outcome for quite some time. Since 2003, Oklahoma State has knocked off Oklahoma just twice. Their last win came in 2014, but since then the Sooners have won by a combined 110 points.

So, again, why should this year be any different?

Well, the Oklahoma State defense. The Cowboys own the nation's sixth-best defense in SP+ and allow just 14.9 points per game. They lead the nation in sacks with 43, with defensive linemen, linebackers, cornerbacks and safeties all getting in on the fun. They play a fast and aggressive style under defensive coordinator Jim Knowles, a semifinalist for the Broyles Award given annually to the nation's top assistant coach.

They might be catching the Sooners at the right time, too. After taking the college football world by storm in the middle of the season, quarterback Caleb Williams has struggled of late. According to ESPN, Williams had a 1.4% interception rate and a 7.6% sack rate in his first three starts. In his past two, those numbers have climbed to 8.3% and 16.3%, respectively. An overaggressive quarterback who holds the ball too long will be playing right into Oklahoma State's hands. The Cowboys have already clinched a spot in the Big 12 title game. But if they want to keep their hopes alive for a possible playoff berth, they need this win.

Extension ladder: It's a battle of 10-year extensions between Penn State and Michigan State. James Franklin and Mel Tucker both secured lucrative deals to stay in the Big Ten after being rumored candidates for other top jobs. This figures to be an annual measuring stick for both programs about their place in the Big Ten East.

The Tide will roll: Auburn quarterback Bo Nix isn't playing against Alabama on Saturday, but that didn't stop him from being part of the conversation this week. His comments about officials favoring Alabama should stir up plenty of controversy, but it's not going to stop the Crimson Tide from running away with this one.

Big 12 title awaits: If Oklahoma State beats Oklahoma and Baylor beats Texas Tech, the Bears will face the Cowboys for the Big 12 title. Keep an eye on Baylor coach Dave Aranda, who could be a hot candidate during this hiring cycle.

Demon Deacons still pushing: Wake Forest might not be a playoff contender anymore, but Demon Deacons can still secure their first trip to the ACC title game since 2006. A win over Boston College on Saturday will do just that.

Midnight pain to Georgia: Clean, Old-Fashioned Hate remains one of the nation's greatest rivalries, even if Georgia has made it one-sided of late against Georgia Tech. Georgia has won the past three games by a combined 100 points, so it'll take a small miracle just for the Jackets to cover the 35-point spread.

THE SUV TO BEAT

2022 Jeep Grand Cherokee puts category's wannabes in their place

By Mark Phelan
Detroit Free Press

MOAB, Utah — "Don't get cocky, kid." Those were Han Solo's words when newbie Luke Skywalker celebrated shooting down his first Imperial warship in "Star Wars," and they could have been Jeep executive Jim Morrison's when he recently chided automakers for SUVs that add a skid plate here, a Torsen differential there, and claim to be serious off-roaders.

Implicitly: "Nice try for a beginner, but don't celebrate. The Death Star is still out there."

The Death Star just arrived. I recently drove the 2022 Jeep Grand Cherokee Trailhawk up a 30% incline of loose sand and shifting rock and over boulders that would stop nearly every would-be competitor dead, and around intimidating mountain switchbacks that challenged my nerve and the Grand Cherokee's on-road performance.

Don't get cocky, kids. Other brands can give their SUVs painstakingly researched outdoorsy names, throwback boxy looks and commercials showing them adjacent to all-terrain vehicles, but the Grand Cherokee is the OG, and it remains the vehicle to beat.

More room and features, lighter weight: The 2022 Jeep Grand Cherokee is in production now. Sales begin later this year. It's a five-seat midsize SUV that competes with vehicles like the Ford Edge and Explorer, Nissan Murano and Pathfinder and Toyota Venza and Highlander. Those SUVs have a mix of two or three rows of seats and carry five to seven people. Midsize SUVs cover both groups of buyers. Five-seaters like the Grand Cherokee account for about 40% of sales in the extremely popular segment. The rest go to more family-oriented three-row models. Jeep added the three-row Grand Cherokee L to get into that market earlier this year.

It shares its architecture, basic engineering and many features with the 2022 Grand Cherokee. The L's a Jeep, so it prioritizes off-road ability, but the five-seat Grand Cherokee is more capable, largely because its shorter length allows it to squeeze around boulders and through gaps too tight for the L.

The 2022 Grand Cherokee is 193.5 inches long — 3.4 inches longer than the outgoing model, but 10.5 ins shorter than the three-row Grand Cherokee L.

The Grand Cherokee's wheelbase increased 2 inches from the outgoing model. Those changes, along with clever design and engineering, increase interior room 6 cubic feet.

A new electrical architecture enables new and upcoming features.

An eight-speed automatic transmission is standard, as is rear-wheel drive. Three four-wheel-drive systems with rising levels of capability are available. The most capable model is the Grand Cherokee Trailhawk, available only with 4WD.

"The electronics went up in weight. The body and everything else went down," chief engineer David Partlow told me.

Driving impressions: I drove a pair of V6-powered 4WD Grand Cherokee Overlands on a variety of roads and a challenging off-road course.

The Grand Cherokee is exceptionally quiet and smooth on paved surfaces. The steering is direct, with good on-center feel. The air suspension cushioned bumps and held the SUV steady on a long mountain road with numerous 15-mph switchbacks.

Passenger space is good, with plenty of storage in door pockets and the center console. The seats are comfortable.

A thoughtful combination of a 10.25-inch touch screen and dials/switches for the frequently used climate and audio functions makes it easy to use the Grand Cherokee's many features.

The optional 950-watt McIntosh audio system delivered outstanding sound. Speakers with lighted "McIntosh" labels in the audio specialist's signature blue-gauge lighting complemented interior design that featured open-pore wood, real metal and soft leather.

The cargo compartment, with its big opening and dimensions, has room for shopping, luggage, even golf bags loaded crosswise — a Grand Cherokee first.

The optional rear-seat entertainment system featured a pair of screens that can stream content independently and are compatible with home service from Amazon Fire TV. A cleverly disguised touch screen in front of the front passenger allows control of rear entertainment, can add stops to navigation routes and more.

Off-road mastery, even electrically: The Grand Cherokee offers three four-wheel-drive systems: Quadra-Trac I, Quadra-Trac II and Quadra-Drive II.

I drove a Trailhawk, the most off-road capable model, equipped with Quadra-Drive II on a course that included steep inclines, loose scree and potentially axle breaking rock climbing.

It came through with flying colors, thanks to features that include a disconnecting sway bar for leaving one wheel dangling in the air, active transfer cases to direct torque front and rear and an electronic locking rear differential that can send full torque to the right or left wheel. Jeep knows full well that most owners will never take a $60,000 Grand Cherokee Trailhawk over a course like the one I surmounted. A handful will, though, and the brand's credibility and reputation rest on their success.

Off-roading consumes much more power, so I expect Jeep engineers brought a portable generator in a support vehicle. Not at all the environmentally beneficent behavior the plug-in hybrid's owners will engage in, but Jeep needs to demonstrate that its transition to electric power is consistent with the brand's historic capability.

Behaving otherwise would be a cocky mistake.

Mazda is back in US with Alabama-produced, Yankee-inspired CX-50

By Henry Payne
The Detroit News

Mazda is making cars in the U.S. again. A decade after the last Mazda6 sedan rolled off the assembly line in Flat Rock — ending a four-decade marriage with Ford — the Japanese automaker announced production of the all-new CX-50 SUV. The cute ute is the product of new nuptials with Toyota in Alabama.

The new Mazda adds some off-road heft to a sleek SUV model lineup known for its on-road manners. The 2023 CX-50 will slot into the brand's lineup next to the best-selling CX-5 and above the entry-level CX-30 SUV and will go on sale next year.

"This new Mazda vehicle has been developed for North America, particularly to support the active and outdoor lifestyles of customers in this region," said Mazda North America boss Jeff Guyton.

Similar in size to the CX-5 crossover, which starts at $26,545 with optional all-wheel-drive, the CX-50 will come standard with AWD befitting its all-terrain ambitions.

Also standard is a more rugged exterior presence with squared-off, heavy-clad fenders in contrast to the round wheel wells of its CX-5 and CX-30 siblings. The front fascia also gets a more aggressive look.

The driver-focused interior of the CX-50 is also familiar to owners of the CX-30 and Mazda3. A wide, horizontal screen mounted high on the dashboard (to keep eyeballs glued to the road) is operated by a remote rotary controller. The interior appears crafted with upscale materials rivaling luxury makes.

Sitting above the passenger compartment is a panoramic moonroof — a first for Mazda and in sync with the car's outdoor ambitions. A new, Zircon Sand exterior paint continues the outdoors vibe.

The Mazda CX-50 is available with a Skyactiv-G 2.5 naturally aspirated engine or Skyactiv-G 2.5 Turbo engine. MAZDA

REVIEW

MX-30 EV is long on style

By Henry Payne
The Detroit News

The Mazda MX-30 is the ZOOM! ZOOM! brand's first electric vehicle and it brings Mazda mojo. It's stylish, feature-rich and fun to drive.

It's also a poster child as to why EVs are niche vehicles.

Entering Telegraph Road off Lone Pine, I flung the front-wheel-drive MX-30 through a 90-degree turn and it rotated beautifully. I stomped the right pedal and the front motor responded instantly with a satisfying, electric WHIIRRRRR! — the instant, buttery-smooth torque launching the EV forward.

On a recent test drive, I rotated heads with the MX-30's nice looks. "Ooooh, I really like the design," said my friend Laurie, lingering on the sculpted rear taillamps after I rolled into her driveway. But Laurie won't be giving up her gas-powered Mazda CX-30 anytime soon.

That's because the MX-30 and the CX-30 share the same platform and — thanks to its gas powertrain — the CX-30 is the better all-around car.

Pal Laurie's gas-powered, $29,875 CX-30 Premium is one of the best values in the subcompact SUV class. Leather seats, head-up display, adaptive cruise control, auto headlights, blind-spot assist, sunroof, 186-horsepower, 392-mile range, flat-screen TV (just kidding about that last one). It's a premium car in a mainstream badge.

2022 Mazda MX-30

Battery-powered, front-wheel-drive small SUV
Price: $34,465 ($38,550 as tested before $7,500 federal tax credit)
Power plant: 35.5kWh lithium-ion battery pack driving front electric motor
Power: 143 horsepower, 200 pound-feet of torque
Transmission: Single-speed automatic
Performance: 0-60 mph, 9.6 seconds (mfr.); top speed, 90 mph
Fuel economy: EPA est. range, 100 miles

My MX-30 tester Premium Plus matched it stride-for-feature, except ... it had 143 horsepower, 100 miles of range, and costs $38,550. Oh.

EV advocates never tire of pointing out that most drivers don't travel more than 30 miles in a day. So what's all this fuss about range?

True enough, most of Laurie's business clients are within the Mazda's 100-mile radius. But, ahem, anything beyond requires a charge. She, like most folks, needs the versatility of gas.

Within its niche electric segment, however, the MX-30 is an intriguing little morsel.

MX-30's low battery helps Mazda maintain its ZOOM! ZOOM! heritage with nimble handling and a 45% stiffer chassis. But Bolt and Kona are no slouches in the handling department either.

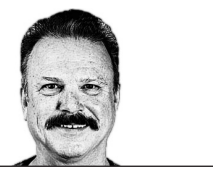
Mazda, aware of its battery shortcomings, tries to divert attention to its style and affordability.

My $38,550 tester is $2,400 under a comparable Bolt EUV, and a whopping $8,225 less than the Kona EV. And that's before you spend about two grand on each vehicle to outfit your garage with a 240-volt charger so you can charge overnight (Mazda helpfully kicks in $500 to help buy a charger).

That relative bargain, however, could be erased by Washington's punishment of foreign automakers. Only American-made, UAW-assembled EVs are currently favored with a $12,500 tax credit in the massive climate legislation, while the small-battery Mazda gets thrown a smaller $7,500 bone.

Mazda recognizes the MX-30's niche status and only offers it for sale in California (so eager buyers may have a long drive back from the dealer), which currently makes up about half of EV sales. There, green is religion and the MX-30 should find an audience of upscale urban buyers whose lifestyle is a perfect fit.

Will cold storage hurt hybrid?



Bob Weber
Motormouth

Jumper cables attached to a car battery. If you store your car for the winter in cold weather, it can take a toll. DREAMSTIME

Q: I am considering buying a hybrid car. When I lay up my conventional car whenever we go to Florida each winter, I connect a battery tender to the battery, and it seems to survive the winter very nicely. However, I am not sure what to do with a hybrid. What will happen to the car sitting for five months in a cold garage? What steps would I take to lay it up? — S.K., Colchester, Connecticut

A: Short answer? The battery pack will get weak. If you leave your hybrid at home in Connecticut, the winter cold will take a toll. Connect the car's charger. This will maintain the drive battery pack much as your battery tender maintains the 12-volt battery. If possible, store the vehicle in a heated garage.

Q: I got a Tesla Model Y last year and have a few questions about drafting. How close do you need to be? How much does it help? How does it affect the truck you are drafting behind? Do truckers care? By the way, love the car and will never buy another ICE [internal combustion engine] car. — D.B., Chicago

A: Drafting, or following closely enough to take advantage of the leading vehicle's eddy, is never a good idea. It leaves very little time to react in an emergency. For example, if the front vehicle swerves to avoid an obstacle, you may not have enough time to avoid the same. If you draft behind a truck, especially a semi, the driver cannot see you. There are blind spots for semi drivers: front, left side, right side and behind. Behind is the worst. If you cannot see the tractor's mirrors the driver cannot see you behind the trailer. Truckers do not like that. Leave drafting to race car drivers on a closed track.

Q: I purchased a Porsche SUV in Florida 5 years ago and it's never been in Indiana during the winter. Do I need to worry about the antifreeze or is that always cared for by the manufacturer, no matter where you purchase it? If not, where is the best place or way to test the level of winter protection? — J.V., Dyer, Indiana

A: Although we still call it antifreeze, the stuff in the radiator is more correctly called coolant. It not only prevents freezing but coolant increases the boiling temperature to well above that of plain water. If you opted for the prepaid Porsche Scheduled Maintenance Plan you can rest easy. The plan provides maintenance at the factory recommended scheduled services. But you can have any qualified technician, dealer or independent, test the coolant quality.

Q: We have a 2019 Subaru that's coming up on a 40,000-mile maintenance check. The closest dealer is over an hour away, one way, and they want about $1,400 for all the necessary things to be done. My question is: Do we need to spend the time and money to visit a dealer, or can we just bring it to an established local garage and have them do the work? — B.F., Pahrump, Nevada

A: You can certainly, and lawfully, take your car to a local shop for service. Just keep all documentation including the repair order and invoice, the names and part numbers of any components such as the oil filter. This will keep the warranty intact unless your car has exceeded the 5-year/50,000 mile Subaru powertrain warranty. To get the full lowdown on this topic, look up the federal Magnuson — Moss Warranty Act.

YOURCAST

OUTLOOK

In 1898, The Portland storm raged across New England producing gale force winds along the coast and heavy snow inland. A foot of snow blanketed Boston, Massachusetts and a whopping 27 inches fell here in New London. While it will be very breezy and chilly on Saturday, the winds will certainly pale in comparison and there will be plenty of sunshine. There is a weak frontal system heading toward the state that has the chance for some snow in the forecast, but it will be poorly organized and so only some snow showers or a period of light snow is forecast for Sunday night.

YANKEES

How did Torres and the Yankees get to this point?

By Matthew Roberson
New York Daily News

NEW YORK — One of the biggest dominoes in the Yankees' relative fall from grace — which has sparked an urgency in Brian Cashman to find a new shortstop — is Gleyber Torres' sharp decline.

Two years ago, as a 22-year-old wunderkind, Torres boomed 38 home runs with an .871 OPS and 125 wRC+, all placing him in the top five among shortstops. In making his second All-Star team and guiding the Yankees within two wins of a World Series appearance, Torres was anointed as one of the faces of the new shortstop generation. Since then, he's been lapped by players like Trea Turner, Fernando Tatis Jr., Tim Anderson and, within his own division, Xander Bogaerts.

The consensus is that Torres is done as the Yankees' shortstop, and his status with the team at all might be in peril. It's not difficult to imagine a world in which the Yankees sign a shortstop in the coming months as well as a first baseman, two areas Cashman has singled out as needing help. If that happens, the only spot for Torres is second base, and DJ LeMahieu will have something to say about that. Other teams would certainly be interested in Torres, who turns 25 in just over two weeks and comes with three more years of club control, should the Yankees plop him on the trading block.

Torres' jarring transition from burgeoning MVP candidate to depreciating trade chip is enough to give a person whiplash. The Yankees got to this point due to back-to-back seasons of immense disappointment that engulfed Torres on both sides of the ball. The 2020 campaign was wonky for plenty of people, but Torres followed that up with another disaster in 2021

Those 38 home runs in 2019 came in 604 plate appearances. Since then, Torres has taken the batter's box 676 times and cleared the wall in just 12 of them. His nine home runs in 2021 was an unthinkable outcome for anyone who watched him lay waste to opponents in the playoffs two years ago. In the 2019 ALDS against the Twins, Torres hit a cool .417, with his five hits in the series consisting of three doubles, a home run and a single. In the next round against Houston, the hot streak continued. Though the Yankees lost in six games, Torres had two long balls and six RBIs.

Playoffs

by No. 8 Hand in the first round.

Third-seeded Maloney and No. 6 Bristol Central, both 9-1, will face each other in a Class L quarterfinal. Maloney has quality wins over Hall and Xavier after losing to Southington in its first game. Bristol Central also lost its first game, to Bloomfield, 7-6, but did not play as difficult a schedule as Maloney after that. Maloney lost to Hand in the semifinals in 2019.

Fourth-seeded Avon lost to Branford 21-7 on Nov. 5 and will face the No. 5 Hornets once again in the Class M quarterfinal at Avon.

Long-simmering lamb for waning fall days

By David Tanis
The New York Times

It's chilly. I want a fire in the hearth and a simmering pot of stew, or a reasonable facsimile thereof on the stove.

Indeed, braises and stews are foremost in my mind these days. That's really all I want to cook and eat throughout the cold months. When lamb shanks came my way recently, I looked to Morocco for inspiration, so the shanks became a kind of tagine, cooked long and slowly to succulence.

To accompany the braised lamb, I chose a spiced carrot salad. Made with the freshest carrots, it always delights. Though most Moroccan salads are made with cooked vegetables, my version uses slivered raw carrots instead.

The lemony carrots taste lovely just as the recipe is written, perfumed with toasted cumin and coriander, a hint of garlic and a touch of cayenne. But the recipe is versatile. If you want to splash out, try adding a pinch of cinnamon and a topping of fluffy chopped cilantro and thinly sliced jalapeño. Or add crumbled feta and olives.

My method for the lamb is a bit of a project when it comes to time, but it's not complicated and, for the most part, it cooks itself while you wait. I first simmer the shanks in lightly salted water. Then, saffron-stained softened onions form the base of the braise, along with a bit of tomato, paprika and dried apricots. After three hours, the lamb is fragrant and tender. Parsnips join the pot later, and chickpeas top the final product. (Take the time to soak and cook dried chickpeas, if you can. Using canned is easier, but freshly cooked chickpeas taste far better.)

Since big lamb shanks can seem daunting, I remove the cooked meat from the bone and cut it into more manageable pieces. Though the chunks of parsnip almost resemble bones at first glance in the final dish, the tagine's overall impression is sweet and golden, both visually and on the tongue. The intermingling of flavors feels magical, perfect for the season.

Lamb shanks with apricots and chickpeas

Makes: 4 to 6 servings
Total time: About 3 ½ hours
About 4 to 5 pounds lamb shanks (4 total)
Salt and pepper
¼ cup olive oil
1 large onion, diced (about 1 ½ cups)
1 ½ teaspoons grated garlic (from 1 large clove)
1 dried bay leaf
Large pinch of saffron
3 tablespoons tomato paste
1 tablespoon sweet paprika
½ pound dried apricots (1 generous cup)
1 pound parsnips, peeled and cut into 2-inch chunks (slice any larger end pieces in half lengthwise)
1 (14-ounce) can chickpeas, drained (1 ½ cups)
½ cup roughly chopped cilantro leaves and tender stems

1. Season lamb shanks generously with salt and pepper. Place in a Dutch oven or heavy-bottomed pot. Cover with 6 cups water, and bring to a boil over high heat. Reduce to a low simmer and cook, covered with lid ajar, for 1 hour. Remove shanks and reserve cooking liquid. Wipe out the pan. (You may cook the lamb shanks in advance, even a day ahead.)

2. Set Dutch oven over medium-high heat and add 2 tablespoons olive oil. Add onions and cook, stirring, until softened, about 5 minutes. Add 1 teaspoon garlic, bay leaf, saffron, tomato paste and paprika. Stir together and let sizzle for 1 minute, then add reserved lamb broth and bring to a boil. Add lamb shanks and apricots, cover with lid ajar and simmer for 1 ½ hours, until meat is very tender, nearly falling off the bone.

3. Remove shanks and place on a cutting board to cool. Add parsnips to simmering broth, and cook until tender, about 15 minutes. Taste broth and adjust seasoning. If necessary, reduce over medium-high heat to concentrate cooking juices.

4. When shanks are cool enough to handle, remove the bones (use your hands). Cut the meat into large chunks and return to the pot to warm through. Transfer meat and sauce to a serving platter.

5. To finish, warm remaining 2 tablespoons olive oil in a saucepan over medium heat. Add remaining ½ teaspoon garlic and let sizzle without browning, about 30 seconds. Add chickpeas and warm them through, about 5 minutes. Season lightly with salt, and toss with the chopped cilantro. Spoon chickpeas over lamb and sauce.

Carrot salad with cumin and coriander

Makes: 4 to 6 servings
Total time: 20 minutes
1 pound medium carrots, peeled and cut into thin matchsticks or grated
3 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
2 tablespoons lemon juice (from 1 lemon)
1 small garlic clove, grated
½ teaspoon cumin seeds, toasted and ground
½ teaspoon coriander seeds, toasted and ground
Pinch of ground cayenne
Salt and pepper
2 tablespoons finely diced preserved lemon (optional)
Whole mint leaves, for serving

1. Put carrots in a medium bowl. Add olive oil, lemon juice, garlic, cumin, coriander and cayenne. Add salt and pepper to taste. Toss to coat. Taste, and adjust seasoning. Leave to marinate for 10 to 15 minutes. Transfer to a serving dish.

2. To serve, sprinkle with preserved lemon, if you like, and garnish with mint leaves.

The power of pumpkin

From sweet muffins to savory soup, try these recipes for the fall season

JeanMarie Brownson
Dinner at Home

My list of favorite pumpkin items grows each fall. By now, I'm over my pumpkin spice latte obsession, but still mighty hungry for the mellow, sweet goodness of pumpkin. Milder and lighter than butternut, cooking with pumpkin easily transitions from sweets to savories.

Peeled, seeded fresh pumpkin chunks freeze well for soups and chili. A healthy supply of canned pumpkin and jars of pumpkin pie spice mean I can turn out desserts in little time.

In fact, canned pumpkin ranks as my favorite tinned food. It transforms into a fast soup, adds body to cakes and makes such lovely pies and muffins.

I also turn canned pumpkin into thick, sweetened pumpkin butter by adding sweet spices, syrup and sugar. A slow simmer creates a mixture that can be packed into small containers to use as a spread on toast, peanut butter sandwiches and as a topping for waffles. This season, I am swirling the butter into my pumpkin cheesecake for a stunning dessert.

Pumpkin muffins stay moist for days—a bonus when company spends the weekend. I lace mine with bits of crystallized ginger, chunks of dark and white chocolate and a handful of pecans. Pumpkin pie spice flavors the batter and the sugary glaze.

Don't forget about savory pumpkin dishes. Creamy pumpkin soup seasoned gently with sweet butter and leeks makes the perfect starter. Serve it simply topped with a drizzle of cream or garnish elaborately as desired. Leftover soup takes the sting out of a cool fall day, especially spiked with spicy curry powder.

Pumpkin swirl cheesecake with speculoos crust

Prep time: 30 minutes
Cook time: 1 hour
Chill time: Several hours
Makes: 8 servings
Notes: Crush the cookies into fine crumbs in a food processor or in a plastic zippered bag with a rolling pin. You can substitute ginger snap cookies or graham crackers for the speculoos cookies.

For the crust:
1 ½ cups (6 ounces) finely crushed speculoos cookies
5 tablespoons melted butter

For the filling:
2 packages (8 ounces each) cream cheese, softened
⅔ cup sugar
2 large eggs
2 large egg yolks
½ of a 15-ounce can (about ¾ cup) pure pumpkin
½ cup sour cream
1 ½ teaspoons pumpkin pie spice
⅓ cup pumpkin butter, see recipe below

For the crust:
1. Heat oven to 325 degrees. Spray bottom and sides of a 9-inch springform pan with cooking spray.
2. Mix 1 ½ cups cookie crumbs and 5 tablespoons melted butter in a small bowl. Press mixture into an even layer over the bottom of the prepared pan. Bake until set, 8-10 minutes. Cool on a wire rack.

For the filling:
1. Reduce oven temperature to 300 degrees. Put 2 packages of softened cream cheese into a large mixer bowl fitted with a paddle blade. Beat on high until smooth and light. Beat in ⅔ cups sugar, scraping bowl frequently, until mixed, then beat in 2 eggs and 2 additional egg yolks until smooth. Beat in ¾ cups pumpkin, ½ cup sour cream and 1 ½ teaspoons pumpkin pie spice until smooth. Scrape mixture into pan with crust.
2. Use a small spoon to dollop pumpkin butter over the batter in a polka-dot pattern. Use a small spatula or blunt knife to swirl pumpkin butter into batter. (Don't swirl into baked crust below.) Bake in the center of the oven until the center of the cheesecake is set but still a bit wiggly, about 50 minutes. Turn off the oven and open it about 5 inches. Let the cake cool in the open oven for 1 hour. Remove from the oven and cool completely on a wire rack.
3. Refrigerate at least 6 hours, or overnight. Remove sides of pan. Serve in wedges.

Pumpkin muffins with ginger, chocolate and toasted pecans

Prep time: 25 minutes
Cook time: 30 minutes
Makes: 18 muffins

For the muffins:
1 ½ cups all-purpose flour
¼ cup whole wheat flour
1 tablespoon pumpkin pie spice
1 teaspoon baking soda
¾ teaspoon salt
¼ cup finely chopped crystallized ginger, optional
½ cup (1 stick) unsalted butter, softened
1 cup granulated sugar
2 large eggs
1 cup canned pure pumpkin
1 cup semi-sweet chocolate chunks (4 ounces)
½ cup white chocolate pieces (2 ounces)
½ cup chopped pecan pieces

For the pumpkin sugar glaze:
¾ cup confectioners' sugar
1 teaspoon pumpkin pie spice
2 tablespoons half-and-half or heavy whipping cream

For the muffins:
1. Heat oven to 350 degrees. Line a standard 12-cup muffin tin with paper muffin liners. (Recipe makes 18 muffins. Use two muffin tins or bake in batches.
2. Mix 1 ½ cups all-purpose flour and ¼ cup whole wheat flour, 1 tablespoon pumpkin pie spice, 1 teaspoon baking soda and ¾ teaspoon salt in a small bowl. Add ¼ cup chopped ginger and mix well.
3. Put ½ cup softened butter into large mixing bowl. Beat on high speed until light. Beat in 1 cup sugar until fluffy. Beat in 2 eggs, one at a time, until well mixed. Beat in ⅓ of the flour mixture, then ½ cup pumpkin. Beat in another ⅓ of flour mixture and then the remaining ½ cup pumpkin. Beat in remaining flour mixture until no streaks remain. Use a rubber spatula to gently fold in ½ cup white chocolate chunks and ½ cup chopped pecans.
4. Use a ¼ measuring cup or scoop to spoon mixture evenly into prepared muffin tins, filling them about ⅔ full. Bake until a wooden pick inserted in the center comes out clean, 28-30 minutes. Cool in pan for 5 minutes, then remove each muffin and let cool completely on a wire rack.

For the pumpkin glaze:
1. Mix ¾ cup confectioners' sugar and 1 teaspoon pumpkin pie spice in a small bowl. Drizzle in just enough half-and-half to make a smooth glaze with the consistency of honey. Drizzle over muffins and let stand until glaze is set. Store in a covered container for up to several days.

Serve pumpkin leek soup topped with a spoonful of pumpkin butter (homemade or bottled) and toasted pumpkin seeds.

Buttery, garlicky pumpkin leek soup

Prep time: 25 minutes
Cook time: 30 minutes
Makes: About 8 cups, serving 6
Note: Alternative serving suggestion: Stir ¼ cup heavy whipping cream and ½ teaspoon curry powder into the finished soup.

1 small or ½ medium-size pie pumpkin, about 2 ¼ pounds
2 small or 1 large leek (14 ounces total), halved lengthwise, well rinsed
½ cup (1 stick) unsalted butter
2 large carrots (8 ounces total), trimmed, thinly sliced
1 quart low-sodium chicken or vegetable broth
3 cloves garlic, crushed
1 to 1 ½ teaspoons salt
Optional toppings: Heavy whipping cream; pumpkin seed oil; extra-virgin olive oil; cheesy croutons; thinly sliced green onions; toasted pumpkin seeds; shredded parmesan; crumbled feta

1. Prepare pumpkin as follows: Cut in half through the stem. Scoop out seeds. Set the cut-side down on the cutting board. Peel the pumpkin. Cut flesh into 1-inch slabs, then cut the slabs into 1-inch chunks. (You should have 5 generous cups of chunks weighing about 1 ½ pounds).
2. Use a sharp knife to thinly slice 1 large leek, including about 3 inches of tender green tops.
3. Melt ½ cup butter in a large saucepan or Dutch oven over medium-low heat. Add pumpkin pieces, leeks and 2 large, thinly sliced carrots. Cover pot and cook, stirring once or twice, until pumpkin starts to soften, about 15 minutes.
4. Stir in 1 quart broth, 3 cloves crushed garlic and 1 teaspoon of salt. Simmer uncovered over low heat, stirring often, until vegetables are fall-apart tender, about 15 minutes. Use an immersion blender to puree soup smooth. (Alternatively, puree soup in small batches in a blender).
5. Reheat soup. Season to taste with additional salt, if desired. Serve hot with some of the optional toppings.

Pumpkin spice pumkin butter tastes like pumpkin pie in a jar. Use it as you would jam.

Pumpkin spice pumpkin butter

Be sure to stir frequently so the mixture doesn't scorch on the bottom of the pan while it cooks and concentrates in flavor.

Prep time: 5 minutes
Cook time: 25 minutes
Makes: 3 generous cups

1 can (29 ounces) pure pumpkin, about 3 generous cups
¾ cup packed dark brown sugar
½ cup apple juice concentrate (not diluted) or unfiltered apple cider
⅓ cup corn syrup, honey or agave syrup
2 tablespoons pumpkin pie spice
¼ teaspoon salt

1. Mix all ingredients in a medium-size heavy-bottomed saucepan. Heat to a boil over medium heat. Reduce heat to low. Cook, stirring nearly constantly, until shiny and thickened to the consistency of jam, about 25 minutes.
2. Cool. Store in a covered container in the refrigerator for up to 2 weeks.

Beet skeptics: Try the air fryer

By Tara Holland
TheKitchn.com

Using the air fryer speeds up the cooking process for the beets. TARA HOLLAND/THEKITCHN.COM

Air frying beets is a quick and easy way to create a nutritious and colorful side dish. The concentrated heat from the air fryer halves the time it would take to roast beets in the oven, and your results will be even crispier.

Ever since reading the "The Nimble Cook," I've been obsessed with making spiced salts. So rather than just tossing the beets with basic salt and pepper, I've created a bay salt, which is made very quickly and easily by whizzing together some dried bay leaves with salt and a pinch of ground white pepper.

You will (intentionally) have leftover bay salt here. Trust me: You'll thank me later. Beyond beets, the bay salt also goes particularly well sprinkled over baked or mashed potatoes, fried or boiled eggs, and on pizza, as I just happily (and accidentally) discovered.

Instead of sprinkling the beets with a fresh herb at the end, I've used some of the highly nutritious (and often underused) beet greens. If your beets didn't come with any greens, just toss with a couple of tablespoons of chopped fresh parsley or chives.

Is it better to peel beets before or after roasting?

When air frying or roasting cut beets, it's always best to peel beforehand. The skin can be a little leathery, especially on larger beets, so it's best to peel and trim away the gnarly tops. A vegetable peeler or paring knife works well. Using disposable gloves is highly encouraged to avoid getting stained hands. The color may bleed into your cutting board, so make sure you wash and scrub it right away after using.

What to serve with air fryer beets

Add them to most salads. They go exceptionally well with creamy cheeses, like goat cheese and feta, and are a match made in heaven with bitter, crunchy walnuts. Use air-fried beets in any grain bowl. Top hummus with the cooked beets, or even add to hummus when making from scratch. Whisk together 1 teaspoon orange zest, 1 tablespoon orange juice, 1 tablespoon apple cider vinegar and 1 tablespoon olive oil, and toss beets into the dressing.

How to cook whole beets in an air fryer

Whole, unpeeled beets cook well in an air fryer. Once scrubbed and trimmed, wrap beets tightly in foil and air fry for 45 minutes to 1 hour, until fork-tender. Let cool slightly, then use paper towels to wipe away the skins.

Air fryer beets

Makes: 2 servings
For the bay salt:
¼ cup loosely packed broken dried bay leaves
2 teaspoons kosher salt
⅛ teaspoon ground white pepper
For the beets:
2 bunches beets (about 3 pounds total), beet greens reserved
1 tablespoon olive oil
1 teaspoon bay salt, divided
Cooking spray

1. Place ¼ cup broken bay leaves, 2 teaspoons kosher salt and ⅛ teaspoon ground white pepper in a spice grinder. Pulse into a fine green powder, around 10 pulses. If needed, sift the powder through a fine-mesh strainer to remove any small pieces of bay leaves.
2. Heat an air fryer to 400 degrees. Meanwhile, prepare the beets.
3. Scrub, trim and peel the beets from 2 bunches. Cut into 1-inch pieces (just over 3 cups). Transfer to a medium bowl. Add 1 tablespoon olive oil and ¾ teaspoon of the bay salt, and toss to combine. (If you are using a mix of beets, the red color will bleed onto the golden beets. So you may wish to toss in separate bowls, but this is not essential.)
4. Lightly coat the air fryer basket with cooking spray. Air frying in batches if needed, place the beets in a single layer in the basket. Air fry for 10 minutes. Flip the beets and air fry until caramelized at the edges and fork-tender, 8 to 10 minutes more.
5. Meanwhile, cut 5 medium beet green leaves into fine shreds (about ¾ cup). Wash and rinse the greens with a salad spinner or fine-mesh strainer. Transfer to a large bowl.
6. Add the air-fried beets to the bowl with the beet greens, sprinkle with ¼ teaspoon bay leaf salt and toss to combine.
Note: If you don't have a spice grinder, you can substitute the bay leaves with 1 tablespoon of lightly toasted coriander seeds to create coriander salt instead, which goes equally well. Transfer the coriander seeds to a mortar and pestle with the salt to crush to a coarse powder. Alternatively, use a zip-top bag and a rolling pin to pound it instead. It will not get as fine as using a spice grinder, but as long as it's ground reasonably well, it will still work out great. (Unfortunately, these methods do not work for bay leaves.)

Butternut squash enchiladas healthy and easy to make

By Breana Killeen | EatingWell

The butternut squash and cauliflower in these easy layered enchiladas are frozen and don't need to be thawed, making this a healthy and quick dinner. Look for canned tomatillos — sometimes labeled green tomatoes — in the international aisle of your grocery store.

Butternut squash and cauliflower enchiladas

Makes: 8 servings
Active time: 25 minutes
Total time: 55 minutes
2 (11-ounce) cans whole tomatillos, drained
2 cups diced white onion, divided
¾ cup packed fresh cilantro
2 small cloves garlic
1 serrano or jalapeno chile, chopped, seeded if desired
2 tablespoons lime juice
1 ½ teaspoons ground cumin
16 (5- to 6-inch) corn tortillas
2 cups frozen diced butternut squash
2 cups frozen cauliflower florets
2 cups shredded Monterey Jack cheese, divided

1. Preheat oven to 425 degrees.
2. Combine tomatillos, 1 cup onion, cilantro, garlic, chile, lime juice and cumin in a blender; puree on high until smooth, about 1 minute.
3. Spread ½ cup of the sauce in a 9-by-13-inch baking dish. Layer 4 tortillas over the sauce. Top with ½ cup squash, ½ cup cauliflower, ½ cup cheese and ¼ cup of the remaining onion. Repeat the layers twice. Top with the remaining tortillas, squash, cauliflower and onion. Spread the remaining sauce on top.
4. Coat a large piece of foil with cooking spray and cover the baking dish tightly. Bake the enchiladas for 10 minutes. Remove the foil and sprinkle on the remaining ½ cup cheese. Continue baking until the cheese is melted and the edges are starting to brown, 15 to 20 minutes more.
Note: Refrigerate sauce (Step 2) for up to three days or freeze for up to three months.

Fast food at its finest

Chef Gordon Ramsay's social media project culminates in a new cookbook of speedy dishes

By Leanne Italie
Associated Press

Chef, TV personality and author Gordon Ramsay prepares tuna katsu in London in March. His new cookbook, "Ramsay in 10," was inspired by a series of social media videos he did making recipes in 10 minutes or less. JUSTIN MANDEL/AP

How did Gordon Ramsay spend his pandemic lockdown? Getting frenetic in a kitchen, of course.

The chef with a dizzying number of books, restaurants and TV shows was home in Cornwall, England, with mouths to feed last year when he did a series of lives on Instagram cooking meals in 10 minutes or less. The fast-moving endeavor he began on YouTube the year before culminated in "Ramsay in 10," his new cookbook filled with recipes made against the clock.

"There's so much fun to be had in cooking food that doesn't need to take 60 or 70 minutes at a time," he said in a recent Zoom interview. " 'Ramsay in 10' was a bit of a miracle because it's the first time in 20 years anyone's ever said to me, 'Stop. Time out.' "

The world is used to seeing a sped-up — and sometimes terrifying — Ramsay, saving failing restaurants, judging chefs competing for prize money, scaling Sicilian cliffs in search of the perfect octopus. But it's not used to seeing him run around his own kitchen surrounded by his wife, Tana, and their kids, ranging from 2 to 23.

The Instagram lives tickled thousands of fans with the rare treat of seeing Ramsay cook in real time.

"No passports. No flights. No schedule," he said of the shutdown. "You're not filming. You're staying home and you're cooking breakfast, lunch and dinner. If you told me that two years ago, I'd never have believed you. We had to get super-creative and go quick and easy and uncomplicated."

He had the pandemic's strains on families top of mind.

"Every doctor and nurse was on their knees, and every hospital was bursting with anxiety and pressure," Ramsay said. "And so what I wanted to do was to take that pressure off."

Mozzarella and basil omelette with asparagus and shiitake mushrooms is one of the recipes featured in Ramsay's new cookbook. JAMIE ORLANDO SMITH/HACHETTE BOOK GROUP

Among his 100 recipes made in a flash: a humble omelet elevated with mozzarella and shiitake mushrooms, and another with fish sauce and shrimp. There's a one-pan pumpkin pasta with amaretti biscuits and lemon thyme, and a quick smoked haddock kedgeree using precooked rice.

Ramsay filled his book — his 31st — with shortcuts and tips on how to stock a pantry and fridge for home cooks on the go. He calls these recipes fast food at its finest — not quicker than a frozen meal tossed into a microwave but faster than a takeout delivery. And he gives home cooks grace on the clock, acknowledging his status as a seasoned pro.

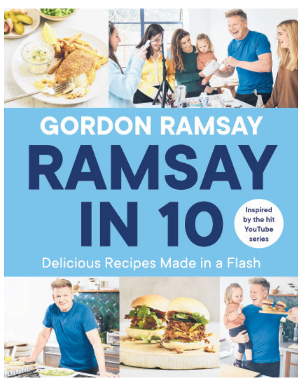
"The way I used to write cookbooks was thinking I'm going to be judged by every chef on the planet. The recipes were laden with 152 ingredients. Cooking at home is completely different, and I've learned that so much more," Ramsay said.

At home, it's usually Tana who does the cooking.

"She is an amazing home cook," he said. "That's the first time I've properly cooked at home. It's like running a restaurant where no one went home."

The 54-year-old Ramsay seems ever-present on streaming and TV networks in the U.K. and U.S. With his own production company, the shows keep coming. There's "Hell's Kitchen," "MasterChef" and "MasterChef Jr.," "Kitchen Nightmares" and "The F Word," to name a few. His latest, "Next Level Chef," is set to premiere on Fox in January with line cooks, home chefs, social media stars and food truck owners competing to be crowned culinary king or queen.

Among his reasons for taking to television as long ago as 1997 was to promote his restaurants. With seven Michelin stars, Ramsay now has 50 restaurants scattered around the world. And he's thankful all survived the pandemic. His latest is due to open at the end of the year in Edinburgh.



Another thing that keeps him on screens, he said, is his lust for discovering new talent. The money ain't bad, either. His net worth has been estimated at roughly $220 million.

Ramsay started out modestly after moving from Scotland to Stratford-upon-Avon as a boy. He washed dishes in restaurants and watched his mom toil as a restaurant cook, with a second job as a nurse. He likens the restaurant world to high-pressure competitive sport, which he caught a taste of as a teenage footballer in England before injuries took him off the pitch for good.

"So at the age of 18, when you're down on your knees, mum always taught me from a very early age, never get bitter, just get even. Dust yourself off and pull yourself together," he said. "So the escape in food was meant to plop myself in an area where nobody knew who I was."

He went to France for three years to study the cuisine there, and a career was born.

To relax, Ramsay works out. He swims, jogs, rides bikes and hikes with 2-year-old Oscar on his back. Being fit serves him well in his fast-paced life on TV and at the top of a restaurant empire, he said.

"My mum was the early influencer in terms of food. We got taught not just to respect food, but not waste it. She always said eat with your belly, not your eyes."

This side dish is pretty — and pretty good for you

By Marianne Williams | EatingWell

These roasted cabbage wedges with honey and balsamic vinegar make an attractive side dish that's also very easy to prepare. You can use red or green cabbage, or make a double batch with one of each for a pretty presentation.

Balsamic roasted cabbage

Makes: 6 servings
Active time: 15 minutes
Total time: 30 minutes
½ teaspoon ground pepper
5 tablespoons olive oil, divided
¾ teaspoon salt, divided
1 large head red or green cabbage, cut into 10 or 12 wedges
2 teaspoons honey
4 tablespoons balsamic vinegar, divided
1 teaspoon fresh thyme leaves (optional)
1. Preheat oven to 425 degrees. Combine pepper, 3 tablespoons oil and ½ teaspoon salt in a small bowl. Brush evenly over all sides of cabbage wedges.
2. Combine honey, 2 tablespoons vinegar and the remaining 2 tablespoons oil in a small bowl; set aside.
3. Arrange the cabbage wedges, cut-side down, on a baking sheet. Roast until they start to brown, about 20 minutes. Brush with half the honey-balsamic mixture; turn over and brush with the remaining mixture. Continue roasting until browned and tender, but still holding their shape, about 15 minutes more. Drizzle with the remaining 2 tablespoons vinegar and sprinkle with thyme, if desired. Sprinkle with the remaining ¼ teaspoon salt. Serve immediately.

Power up with delicious no-bake energy bites

America's Test Kitchen

Different types of food can give you different types of energy. Sweet foods, such as cookies and candy, give you a lot of energy fast. However, that energy lasts for only a little bit of time since sugar moves quickly through your body.

But foods like these energy bites, which combine complex carbohydrates (oats), protein (nut butters) and fiber (oats and nut butters), as well as some sugar, give you longer-lasting energy.

Makes: 12 bites
¾ cup (2 ¼ ounces) old-fashioned rolled oats
⅓ cup peanut, almond or sunflower butter
⅓ cup sliced almonds
⅓ cup dried cranberries
2 tablespoons honey
⅛ teaspoon salt
1. Stir all the ingredients in a bowl with rubber spatula until well combined.
2. Use your wet hands to roll the mixture into 12 balls (about 1 tablespoon each). Place the balls on a plate and cover with plastic wrap.
3. Refrigerate the balls until firm, at least 30 minutes.
Note: You can add 1 tablespoon of chia seeds or ground flax seed to oat mixture in Step 1, if desired. Energy bites can be refrigerated in an airtight container for up to three days.
